Jeffers Gets Clearance For Rubber Production

Promises He'll See Reduced Program Through, Come 'Hell or High Water'

By Ben W. Gilbert
Post Staff Writer

Rubber Director William M. Jeffers predicted last night that he would "get the rubber program through, come hell or high water," after War Production Chief Donald M. Nelson acted to give a full production "go ahead" to plants capable of producing 452,000 tons of synthetic rubber.

A special directive which Nelson is expected to announce shortly has been prepared to settle the "battle of priorities," involving conflicts among the rubber, high-octane gasoline, aircraft, escort vessel and merchant ship programs.

The production chief cut the total program about 6 per cent below Jeffers' estimate of "rock bottom" requirements, it was learned.

Nelson's action is understood to bear the President's stamp of approval, since Economic Stabilization Director James F. Byrnes helped settle the dispute in his role of "assistant president."

'Rock-Bottom' Estimate 49.5%

Under the new directive, the rubber "czar" is slated to get a full speed ahead signal for 51.5 to 55 per cent of his Buna S program—most important synthetic used in manufacture of tires, with top rating going to 43.6 per cent of the total Baruch report program of 1,037,000 tons.

Nelson referred only to the Buna S part of the program when he announced recently that Jeffers would get a 55 per cent "go ahead," officials in Nelson's office said.

Jeffers originally demanded a "go ahead" for 65 to 70 per cent of his program, but later made a "rock bottom" request for priorities on 49.5 per cent, including about 37 per cent of his Buna S program.

Asked if he was satisfied with this decision, Jeffers replied, "You don't get everything you want in this world."

He added that "I came down here to get the rubber program through and I am going to get the rubber program through, come hell or high water, and you can quote me on that."

Asked if he thought the new priorities order would wreck his program, compelling him to ask to have it revised, he said: I am going to see that it doesn't wreck it; that's all the comment I'll make."

For Buna S alone, a go-ahead was granted on 435,000 tons. However, production of substantially more rubber may result, since Jeffers was allowed more than 55 per

Liquor Rationing Throughout U. S. Due by Midyear

By Robert F. Loftus
United Press Staff Correspondent

New York, Jan. 29.—Nationwide liquor rationing is a virtual certainty by mid-1943 and for the duration of the war, sources close to the liquor industry told the United Press today.

Faced with the necessity of stretching out a 3½-year reserve of whiskies to last into the post-war period, the Nation's distillers are now appealing to State liquor authorities for strict limitation of sales to the public—involving enforcement of an earlier curfew for taverns, cafes and bars in other establishments, and possible issuance of ration coupons that would limit package store customers to as little as one or two quarts of distilled spirits weekly.

Formal rationing of liquor drinkers already has been initiated in 12 of the 19 "monopoly" States where all retail liquor stores are owned by the State, and in the remaining 26 States—Kansas, Mississippi and Oklahoma are "dry"—the distillers have begun limiting the quantities of whisky and gin available to wholesale distributors.

Birthday Dinner Attracts 800

More than 800 celebrants defied the worst traffic conditions in several years to join in celebrating the President's sixty-first birthday in the ballroom of the Mayflower last night.

This was the big event of the two-day celebration which had begun in the morning with the District Commissioners welcoming visiting movie stars and which continued during the day with the stars entertaining casualties and winding up with midnight shows at three theaters.

Storm Leads To Death of 1, Injuries to 7

Gas Poisoning Blamed in Death Of Parked Driver

As District of Columbia and the environs yesterday slowly recuperated from Thursday's sleet and snowstorm, these were results chalked up against the storm:

One death.
Seven persons injured.
Fourteenth Street Bridge closed.
Streets damaged throughout the city.
General wear and tear on almost irreplaceable vehicles.

Clinton Smith, 26, of Del Ray, Fla., died as the result of what is believed to have been carbon monoxide gas seeping into the cab of his truck at New York and Florida Avenues Northeast. Police said Smith apparently decided to stop for the night, as driving was bad, and kept his motor running to keep warm.

The Weather Bureau forecast slowly rising temperatures for today and added that the mercury probably would soar high enough "to help a lot" in removing the 5 inches of ice coating the streets.

Hurt in Fall

Injured were Newton E. Robinson, a bus driver for the Capital Transit Co., of 1407 Allison Street Northwest, who was found unconscious, apparently from carbon monoxide, in his bus in the 7100 block of Georgia Avenue by a passerby, who called police. He was taken to Emergency Hospital where he condition was undetermined.

Another person injured was Alexander Hodkinson, 65, of 2009 Rosedale Street Northeast, night watchman at Benning Road and Oklahoma Avenue Northwest, who sustained a possible fracture of the right leg and hip when he fell

Arbuckle Guilty Of Embezzlement

After deliberating for 1 hour and 45 minutes, a District Court jury yesterday convicted William Withers Arbuckle, 47, former manager of the Senate Restaurant, of embezzling $1080 of the restaurant's funds in 1938.

He was ordered to appear in court at 2 p. m. next Tuesday when, it was indicated, additional charges of contempt of court may be brought against him.

Maj. L. B. Barringer, Noted Glider Expert, Was Aboard Craft

Two Washington Army officers are among nine passengers and crew aboard an Army airplane nearly a week overdue on a flight over the Caribbean, the War Department announced yesterday.

They are:

Col. Walter Sumpter Smith, 46, of 3706 Morrison Street Northwest, chief of the transport and facilities division of the Army Air Forces, former chairman of the Air Safety Board of the Civil Aeronautics Authority, and formerly head of the commission which built the Washington National Airport.

Maj. Lewin Bennitt Barringer of 3122 Q Street Northwest, chief of the glider production and training unit of the Air Support Command, and former gliding and soaring champion.

Others aboard the missing airplane, all of the Air Forces, are:

First Lieut. John L. D'Azzo, Tampa, Fla.

First Lieut. A. K. Khoury, Chester, Pa.

Second Lieut. John T. Torrilo, Bridgeport, Conn.

Second Lieut. John G. Marvin, Cincinnati.

Sergt. John A. Miller, Kaloma, Ia.

The War Department said the airplane left San Juan, Puerto Rico, last Sunday for an unrevealed destination. Nothing has been heard from it since.

Native of Alabama

Colonel Smith, a native of Alabama, came to Washington in 1935 to head the airport-building program of the agency which eventually became the Works Progress Administration.

In 1938, when the Civil Aeronautics Authority was created, Colonel Smith was appointed to its safety board, of which he subsequently became chairman. He resigned later the same year to head the commission chosen to build the National Airport at Gravelly Point.

Colonel Smith left this work in December, 1940, when the Thirty-first Division, of which he was air officer, was called into Federal Service. Having left Lehigh University in his junior year in 1917 to become an airplane pilot in the first World War, he had been a member of the 106th Observation Squadron, Alabama National Guard. He commanded that organization until his promotion to lieutenant colonel on the division staff. He was promoted to colonel last summer.

Flynn Trails By 3 Votes, Check Shows

Byrd Announces He Will Oppose Confirmation as Envoy to Australia

By Robert De Vore
Post Staff Writer

Edward J. Flynn of the Bronx last night lacked at least three votes for confirmation as Minister to Australia, on the basis of the most reliable check available to determine how the Senate actually will vote on the nomination of the resigned Democratic National Committee chairman.

The source of this opinion on the trend of the bitterest political fight the Senate has known in years cannot be revealed, but Administration Senators do not dispute the finding.

The test of Senate sentiment on Flynn came as Senator Byrd (Democrat) of Virginia made his long-expected public announcement that he would vote against "consenting" to President Roosevelt's nomination of his political chieftain.

Says He's Unqualified

In a prepared statement of 11 paragraphs, Byrd, long-time Administraiton foe, took the position that the President proposed to send Flynn on a "front line" diplomatic mission of "great importance" and asserted that a diplomat, no more than an Army general, should not be sent to the front "merely to reward political service."

Byrd declared that after a careful reading of testimony on charges brought against Flynn he has been unable to find a single "convincing statement that he (Flynn) is qualified by experience or temperament" for his "very important duties."

In the 210 pages of testimony taken in three days of public hearings before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, "only a few unconvincing words" are offered respecting his qualifications," Byrd stated.

Thinks He Was Unethical

Referring to the stand frequently taken by Flynn's supporters that the committee hearings failed to produce evidence substantiating any of the charges against Flynn, Byrd declared:

"A careful review of these charges convinces me that, to say the least, there was a lack of ethical nicety shown by Mr. Flynn, which does not add to his reputation or his stature."

It is not possible, Byrd remarked, for a Senate committee or individual Senators to "try" Flynn on the charges, but, he added, he found the conclusion inescapable that the Democratic leader was unethical, especially on the basis of testimony given the committee by William B. Herlands, New York City commissioner of investigation.

(In the testimony of Herlands is the statement that, in his opinion, Flynn knew city paving blocks were laid at his home at Carmel, N. Y., by city employes.

President Roosevelt, Byrd declared, "is harassing the Senate in submitting a nomination which he must have known would create a bitter and acriminous debate at

Air Offensive

By the Associated Press

London, Jan. 29.—The Axis port of Sfax on the Tunisian coast, a communications and supply point vital to the enemy's scheme to join the army of Tunisia with that of Marshal Rommel from Libya, has been greatly damaged in the most powerful American bombing attack yet delivered in the war in North Africa.

This unprecedented raid—a "saturation" assault so effective that even the Italian high command acknowledged "heavy damage" to the port—was disclosed today in an Allied North Africa communique that again reported no ground action of consequence.

It was accompanied by word that Rommel's rearguard had been under British artillery fire in the Zuara area 35 miles short of the Tunisian frontier. Rommel's big guns were replying—an indication that while his advanced elements were far ahead and into Tunisia he yet had withheld forces of considerable weight to harry the British pursuit.

Six Axis Planes Felled

The Sfax raid, which was delivered yesterday, was driven home by the largest number of planes ever sent by the Twelfth United States Air Force against a single target. Flying Fortresses led off, followed and supported by medium bombers, B-25 Mitchells and B-26 Marauders and escorted by P-38 Lightning fighters. Six Axis planes rising to the defense were shot from the sky.

"The Fortresses," said the air force spokesman, "scored direct hits on the docks, starting large fires, while B-25s dropped bombs at 50-foot intervals and all over the freight yards."

The B-26s concentrated on harbor works and warehouses, setting big fires.

Two Allied Planes Lost

All these widespread operations in the Tunisia theater cost only two Allied planes. An overnight enemy bombing attack in the Algiers area cost him three bombers.

The Axis radios, nervously anticipating the major Allied blows which were believed in preparation, continued to broadcast reports of this or that Allied offensive action, all of which were invalidated by the announcement of the Allied command:

"There is no change in the

Roosevelt, Vargas Agree On War Aims

Dakar Never Again Will Peril Americans, Two Leaders Promise

By the Associated Press

Rio de Janeiro, Jan. 29.—President Getulio Vargas announced tonight that a complete accord on the war effort had been reached between the United States and Brazil as a result of his conferences with President Roosevelt aboard a United States destroyer yesterday in the Potengi River harbor at Natal.

Vargas made his statement soon after returning here by plane from the parleys at the easternmost stronghold of the hemisphere.

He said the affairs of the nations at war were the principal subjects of the discussions.

Optimistic over the outcome, he said he had encountered a "firm decision in the crusade in which we all are engaged."

[A statement issued at the White House last night said the two Presidents "are in complete agreement that it must be permanently and definitely assured that the coasts of West Africa and Dakar never again under any circumstances be allowed to become a blockade or invasion threat against the two Americas."—Editor's note.]

Complete Accord

Smiling broadly as he received newspaper representatives at a conference in the Presidential Palace, Vargas said he was "highly optimistic" following his talks with President Roosevelt and a "complete accord between the two nations has been reached on military and economic cooperation."

His first act upon returning in an American four-motored bomber from Natal was to confer for an hour with Foreign Minister Aranha.

Guadalcanal Attack Costs Japs 9 Planes

American Fighters Turn Back Attack; Foe's Base Captured

By Marshall Andrews
Post Staff Writer

A Japanese field headquarters has been captured by United States ground forces on Guadalcanal Island, the Navy reported yesterday, while air units beat off an attack and carried devastation to enemy bases in the Solomons.

In their abortive attack on Guadalcanal by air, the Japanese lost nine Zeros destroyed, and six probably destroyed, and turned back without dropping any bombs.

United States air assaults on enemy positions and fleet forces in the Solomons started large fires, damaged three cargo vessels and two destroyers, and shot down a Zero. Four United States airplanes were missing in the defense of Guadalcanal.

8872 Japanese Toll

Besides capturing the enemy command post, troops on the strategic little island counted 36 Japanese killed, 3 captured and much enemy equipment seized. So far at least 8872 Japanese have died on Guadalcanal, and 791 aircraft have been destroyed, and 57 Jap ships have been sunk and 7 others probably sunk in the Battle of the Solomons. United States losses have been 29 ships and an estimated 200 airplanes, with casualties about one-sixth of those inflicted on the enemy's troops.

Heaviest losses were inflicted on Japanese air forces Wednesday morning (Solomons time) when enemy dive-bombers and high-level bombers, with a strong escort of Zero fighters, approached Guadalcanal. They were met by United

97,000 Enemy Prisoners Taken; Another Town Near Rostov Falls

By the Associated Press

London, Jan. 29.—Tearing huge gaps in Axis puppet ranks west of Voronezh, the Red army has killed, routed, or trapped seven enemy divisions in three days, and run its captive toll to nearly 100,000 prisoners since mid-January, Moscow announced tonight in a special communique recorded here by the Soviet radio monitor.

In the Caucasus the Russians overran the Kuban stronghold and rail center of Kropotkin, 130 miles below Rostov, and swept on toward Tikhoretsk, key rail junction 35 miles farther north, the Russians said. This drive threatens to trap thousands of Nazis in the lower Caucasus.

More than 1000 Germans were killed in street fighting inside Kropotkin, said the regular midnight Russian communique.

The Russians acknowledged determined resistance on the southern front near Rostov where "the Germans are bringing up a large number of tanks and motorized infantry ... Soviet troops repulsed enemy counterattacks and slowly advanced."

In a lengthy special bulletin the Russians announced these results on the Voronezh front, which now has been expanded to include the lower part of the central front:

Advances of 24 to 31 miles on a 43-mile front in three days, putting the Red Army within 75 miles of Kursk and 55 miles of Belgorod, two key Axis bases on the Kursk-Kharkov Railway.

The killing of 12,000 Axis troops, and the capture of 14,500. Up to Thursday, the communique said, 86,000 Axis troops had been captured since the Voronezh offensive began January 13.

The capture today of Novy-Oskol, 55 miles east of Belgorod, in which an entire Italian Alpine Corps was wiped out or taken prisoner. The prisoner toll was 11,000 Italians, including the divisional commanders, Generals Battista, Pascalini, and Umerci, and their staffs.

This raised the grand total of prisoners to 97,000.

200 Localities Recaptured

More than 200 localities have been recaptured by the Russians above and below the 50-mile railway between Voronezh and Kastornoye on the line running to Kursk.

This has been done in three days, the communique said. This front had been manned mostly by Rumanians, Hungarians, Italians and other satellite troops, but the seven Axis divisions that were routed, killed or now are being annihilated east of Kastornoye were German, the communique said. The capture of Kastornoye was announced yesterday.

The presence of so many German divisions in this area indicated the Nazis were rushing re-

Hitler Flew To Stalingrad To Boost Morale

Madrid, Jan. 29 (U.P.).—Adolf Hitler flew to Stalingrad early in January and, in a dramatic interview with his corps commanders there, told them they must fight on to the last man, reports from France said tonight.

Hitler was said to have decided upon the trip when the rapidity of the Russian advance precluded the organization of any relief army.

He was accompanied by his personal chief of staff and two aides, and 25 fighter planes escorted his aircraft.

Every day the Sixth Army held out at Stalingrad gave the German command additional time to reorganize to stem the Soviet winter onslaught Hitler allegedly said; therefore it must resist to the last man without thought of surrender.

Jurisdictional Dispute Saves Flier From 2 Firing Squads

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, Jan. 29.—Maj. C. W. Sawyer told today how two native firing squads argued over which one would shoot him, following a forced landing of his plane in a Tibetan jungle, and how a missionary interceded and saved his life.

"I was forced down by weather and lack of gas in a steep canyon in Tibet," said Sawyer, back from service with the American "Flying Tigers" in China.

"I was knocked unconscious and when I recovered my senses, I found the ship surrounded by a horde of the Lolo Tribe of natives.

"Unable to decipher my identification flag signed by the generalissimo, they lined me up before a firing squad.

"Just then, a second tribe appeared with their own firing squad and wrested me from the first.

"This went on for some time. Finally, unable to agree who should have the distinction of shooting me, they started walking.

"For four days and three nights, we hiked through the worst country I have ever seen, until we came to a village with a missionary school teacher.

"This man could read my identification and persuaded them to turn me loose.

To Be Named Soon

Gen. Eisenhower Seen as Head Of Unified Tunisian Command

By the United Press

Allied Headquarters, North Africa, Jan. 29.—A unified command for the Battle of Tunisia will be named soon with Lieut. Gen. Dwight D Eisenhower as Allied commander in chief, and Lieut. Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery, head of the British Eighth Army, as Allied commander of ground forces in the field, it was understood tonight.

British Air Marshal A. W. Tedder was expected to be in charge of aerial operations, and apparently Admiral Sir Andrew B. Cunningham will remain as naval commander in chief.

Information indicated that Lieut. Gen. K. A N. Anderson would retain leadership of the British First Army, while a new general would be named to the British Eighth Army. Presumably Lieut. Gen. Mark Clark would stay as head of the American Fifth Army.

At first most of the forces belonged to the British First Army under Anderson, with attached American units. Now considerable French forces have entered the field, and the American force has been much enlarged.

It is apparent that when the Allies attack the forces of Marshal Edwin Rommel and Gen. Jurgen von Arnin in Tunisia, the drive will be a coordinated one by the Eighth Army from the east and the joint Allied forces from the west.

The selection of Tedder would be the natural choice because of the distinctive job he did in the Libyan campaign, it was said. The exact role of United States Maj. Gen. Carl M. Spaatz, air commander under Eisenhower, in the reported impending setup is not publicly known, but it was considered probable that he would remain in Africa in a high position under Tedder.

It was believed the command would be named as an outgrowth of the conferences between President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Winston Churchill in Casablanca.

30 Per Cent Increase

Overtime Pay Measure Framed By Civil Service Committees

By Robert W. Harvey
Post Staff Writer

The outline of a new Federal overtime bill, guaranteeing United States workers extra hour pay for the duration, was agreed upon yesterday at a conference of Civil Service officials and representatives of both House and Senate Civil Service Committees.

The conference's proposal, based on bona fide time-and-a-half compensation for all hours over 40 a week, would give 48-hour employes a 30 per cent increase over their November wage levels. For 44-hour workers, it would mean a 15 per cent boost over November.

The temporary pay act now in effect gave the former group an increase of about 21 per cent, and the latter group about 10 per cent. Most employes, the conference was told, are now on a 48-hour week

Classifications such as mileage workers and legislative employes, whose jobs cannot be adapted to overtime work, would be given a flat 15 per cent raise by the new plan.

The formula worked out at the conference will be written into the form of legislation and introduced by Senator Mead (Democrat), of New York, who was delegated by the Senate Civil Service Committee to draft a new bill. The temporary law expires April 30.

Both Mead and Representative Ramspeck (Democrat), of Georgia, House Civil Service Committee chairman, attended the session. The new bill, as they explained it, will involve six fundamental points:

1. Time-and-a-half pay will be given to all hours in excess of 40 in a week.

2. The overtime will be computed on the basis of a 260 work-day year instead of the artificial 360 work-day year now used. The 360 denominator, specified in the temporary bill, actually figures out to only about time and a quarter and the higher rates offered in the new bill are mostly accounted for by this change.

3. A ceiling will be provided, specifying that the overtime rate computed for a $2900-a-year salary

Hitler May Omit Anniversary Speech

War Sidelights

Copyright by Chicago Sun

London, Jan. 29.—Delayed but authentic information reaching London revealed that Baron Carl Gustave Mannerheim, commander of the Finnish army, sent a note to Pope Pius XII in November, appealing for the Vatican's assistance in opening negotiations for separate Finnish peace talks.

According to a reliable source, General Mannerheim offered to accept Finland's 1939 frontiers. General Mannerheim's principal condition was that the United States should guarantee Finland's borders.

Meanwhile it became known that Russia would refuse any settlement which would again bring Finnish territory within 20 miles of Leningrad.

U. S. Bomber Explodes

Madrid, Jan. 29 (AP).—The official Spanish news agency reported today that an American-type four-motored bomber exploded in the air last night over the outskirts of Ceuta, Spanish Morocco, killing seven members of the crew. One plane was hit recently by antiaircraft fire, killing a correspondent.

Nazis Bombed in France

Bern, Switzerland, Jan. 29 (AP).—A Swiss Telegraphic Agency dispatch from Geneva reported today that 25 German soldiers had been seriously wounded at Lyon, France, by the explosion of a bomb hurled into their ranks by a cyclist who escaped. The dispatch said two civilians who fled from the scene instead of aiding in the search for the bomb-thrower were shot.

Britain's Needs Revealed

Birmingham, England, Jan. 29 (AP).—Production Minister Oliver Lyttelton told an audience of workers today that Britain depends upon the United States for roughly 20 per cent of the nation's war supplies.

This, he said, includes such diverse items as clothing for troops and equipment for bomber squadrons, but excludes merchant shipbuilding.

In the same three-day period, "according to incomplete data," the Russians said they captured 107 tanks, 340 guns, 254 machine guns, 8000 rifles, 40 radio transmitters, 1217 trucks, 307 motorcycles, 24 trains with military loads and 36 ammunition, arms and food depots.

The Russian break-through in this area where the Axis has been building its famed hedgehog defenses since last fall was accomplished by Soviet troops that struck from the north, east and south.

Among the towns now in Russian hands in this area are Lachinovo, 10 miles west of Kastornoye, which is the junction of the Voronezh-Kursk and Valuiki-Yelets Railways, and innumerable other places within this roughly triangular area.

The location of the newly won towns above Kastornoye and Voronezh bears out a German radio commentator's announcement last night that the Russian Voronezh front now had overlapped with the lower central front which extends northwestward to the Orel area.

The same German radio commentator, Capt. Ludwig Sertorius, asserted the Russian progress was not to an extent "to justify the enormous (Russian) sacrifices."

A Soviet Springboard

Possession of this north-south railway on which are Kastornoye and Novy Oskol, will give the Russians a springboard for their next lunge toward the main Kursk-Kharkov railway which was the starting point for Germany's backfiring 1942 offensive.

At Stalingrad, 350 miles southeast of Kastornoye, the Russians said they were putting to death the last few ragged thousands of of an Axis assault army that once had numbered 220,000 men. Moscow dispatches said 5000 or 7000 were all that remained in the Russian noose.

(The Moscow radio in a broadcast heard in New York by the FCC said that Lieutenant General Repke, commander of the 297th German Division trapped in this area, had surrendered himself and his men, being "the first German officer who had the courage to oppose Hitler's orders.")

Nazi General Describes Horror

Berlin, Jan. 29 (German Broadcasts Recorded by United Press in New York).—Gen. Kurt Deitmar, a military commentator, said today that at Stalingrad the Germans were fighting "in rags, without food or ammunition or hope."

"Amidst the twisted steel girders and the last remnants of the buildings of the Red October plant, the last defenders of Stalingrad are resisting heroically the continuous savage onslaughtes of the enemy," Dietmar said.

"Since November, when the Soviet pincers closed in from the north and south, these men have been fighting to the last cartridge and the last drop of blood."

Allied Bombs Urged To Help Berlin Mark Nazis' Tenth Year

By Howard Berry
International News Service Staff Writer

London, Jan. 29.—Axis radio reports contained the surprising intimation today that the tenth anniversary of Adolf Hitler's ascension to power may pass Saturday without the customary speech by the Fuehrer and attendant flag-waving and fanfare.

Instead of a harangue by Hitler additional loads of high explosive and incendiary bombs may be dropped from Allied planes.

In this latter connection, W. E. McLachlen, Liverpool city councilor, today sent the following telegram to Prime Minister Churchill:

"Liverpool would applaud a gift of 'tinned plums' dropped by 1000 bombers on Berlin tomorrow as a gift to the 'beloved Fuehrer.' Will you oblige?"

Goering to Give Pep Talk

A Berlin broadcast of the purported "official program" for Saturday's observance said it calls for Propaganda Minister Joseph Goebbels to highlight the celebration by reading a Hitler proclamation at the conclusion of his own speech at 4 p. m. Goebbel's talk will be preceded at 11 a. m. by a pep talk to the German armed forces by Reichsmarshal Hermann Goering. The day's events will be opened at 9 a. m.

No mention was made in this program of a Hitler speech.

Another unusual note in the Nazi pre-anniversary symphony was sounded in an order issued by Goebbels that, for the first time since the Swastika regime swung into power, no flags would be displayed for the observance. No immediate reason was given for this decree, but informed quarters pointed out it might be more in keeping with the bad news from the fronts and the announcement of the German labor draft.

Thus the no-flag rule may be aimed at building up a fighting spirit of grim determination.

Defeat Possible, Paper Warns

(One German newspaper warned the home front that "it is high time for us to understand a war can be lost, even if it has been led in the most favorable circumstances," declared the British radio, heard by C. B. S. in New York.

(B. B. C. quoted another German paper as declaring, "if the enemy strikes at us because we leave our flank open to his assault, he will deal us a mortal blow which will bring about the defeat of Germany.")

An imposing delegation of high Nazi leaders, headed by Gestapo Chief Heinrich Himmler, met members of the Italian Fascist party arriving at Berlin to attend the celebration.

In Britain, persistent rumors circulated that Hitler will openly abandon his personal command of the German army, but they could not be confirmed immediately.

There was no further word during the day of the activities of the American ground forces which earlier had been reported pointed toward the rear of the Mareth Line in southeastern Tunisia, behind which considerable of Rommel's forces have been deployed.

Flier Enjoys Champagne Bath In Casablanca

Chicago, Jan. 29 (AP).—Lieut. D. V. August, 27, Naval flyer from Whittier, Calif., took a champagne bath in Casablanca, he said today.

He related that after his plane was downed in landing operations he was taken prisoner and lodged for one night in an old horse stable, where he "caught a beautiful case of cooties."

Upon his release he went to a Casablanca hotel, where he said he "couldn't get any sleep because these cooties kept biting." Figuring alcohol would be a good disinfectant, he bought several bottles of champagne at 17 cents a quart.

"I stood in the bathtub," he said. "With one hand I poured it over me and with the other, into me."

Bosnia Reports Series of Quakes

London, Jan. 29 (AP).—Reuters reported from Istanbul, Turkey, tonight that one of the longest series of earthquake shocks ever recorded in Europe had been in progress in central Bosnia since December 29.

During the first week, shocks came every quarter hour, and even now five to six shocks are recorded daily, the agency said. Material damage was heavy but only 19 lives have been lost, the report said.

Giraud Explains

French Unity Held Remote At Present

By Relman Morin
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, Jan. 29.—French political complications concerning North Africa appeared as numerous as ever tonight after Gen. Henri Honore Giraud declared that he was in agreement with Gen. Charles de Gaulle only concerning "liaison on military, economic and financial matters" and that no prospects of any single united French movement existed at present.

At the same time, a member of De Gaulles' own staff, returning from the Casablanca meetings, forecast a revolution in metropolitan France when the German hold there is broken if former Vichy men continue to have a part in the North African administration.

"Even General Giraud must understand that," said the Fighting French officer, Maj. Claude de Boislambert.

Addressing a press conference at Allied headquarters in North Africa, Giraud declared "the question of politics" had not been taken up with De Gaulle, Fighting French leader, when the two were brought together during the historic Roosevelt-Churchill meetings.

Giraud pointed out, however, that this discussion with De Gaulle at Casablanca was a preliminary step to others which would be taken.

"Both De Gaulle and I have agreed we must go progressively and methodically in our negotiations," he said.

In a statement issued before the conference, the high commissioner brought out for the first time that his government "does not aim at establishing any kind of regime, but only at assuring the best day-to-day administration of the French territories remaining free."

"This government is the temporary custodian of French sovereignty until the forty millions of Frenchmen at home can freely express their opinions," the statement continued.

During the conference, the general asserted he was willing to give the Jews in North Africa back their property and permit Jewish children in the schools. He added, however, that "these moves must be made gradually."

He said that so far as he was concerned Jews, Communists and all creeds were entitled to be treated exactly alike in North Africa as long as they worked for the good of France.

"The policy of the Germans is completely against the policy of the French in regard to Jews," he said, adding that the time he spent in Nazi prisons in Germany made him hate Hitler's measures.

Assured of More Allied Aid

Disclosing that he had asked President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill for substantial equipment for the French army at once, Giraud said he was assured he would get it.

"The British and Americans have loaned the French some weapons in Tunisia, but this is but a drop in the bucket," he said. "I hope public opinion in America and Britain will help speed up the sending of arms."

De Boislambert, who joined De Gaulle after escaping from a Vichy prison, declared the North African situation was fraught with dangerous possibilities. He said bitterness against the Vichyites was so great in France that "retention of these men can easily lead to civil war and revolution."

The French people respect General Giraud, he said, but refuse to accept the men around him in North Africa.

"Having suffered so long under Vichy, their greatest fear is that Vichy men will accompany Allied landings in France if and when a second front is established there," he said.

Prospects Remote For Political Unity

By Wes Gallagher
Associated Press Staff Writer

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, Jan. 29.—Any political union placing all Frenchmen under one banner appeared remote today.

It was understood that union was being blocked chiefly by De Gaulle. One of the provisions of the Casablanca agreement, it has been reported, was that Gen. Georges Catroux, who has been High Commissioner for Syria, would be sent to Algiers to take a high post in the Giraud government and also act as liaison officer between the two French movements.

This was to be done immediately, but since returning to London General de Gaulle is said to be balking at carrying out the plan.

While a prima donna attitude on the part of both men is making any definite settlement between the two French movements extremely difficult, it is understood that Giraud is inclined to go farther toward reaching an agreement than De Gaulle.

Vargas, Roosevelt Agree on War Aims

The salient points developed at the press conference were these:

1. Complete agreement has been reached on war operations.

2. Brazil agrees to do her part and fill any need of the United Nations.

[It was believed in Washington that in this connection the conferences may have included discussion of a proposal that Brazil make a large number of merchant vessels available to this country. It also was believed that one of the topics might have been the sending of a Brazilian army force to the front lines. Brazil was reported several months ago to have a potential army of a half million men.—Editor's note.]

3. The United Nations are prepared for a long war but "surprises may happen."

4. President Roosevelt was "completely satisfied" at the outcome of the Casablanca conference, as one of the chief objectives had been to obtain the cooperation of a united France in the war effort.

"We conferred at length over all points relating to our common interest and particularly over the cooperation of Brazil and the United States," Vargas said.

Roosevelt Optimistic

"I can assure you that our agreement was complete on all points we discussed.

"I found President Roosevelt in the best of health and spirits, his intense activity demonstrating a firm decision to carry forward the crusade in which we all are engaged. President Roosevelt was frankly optimistic over the outcome of the battle."

"We discussed the affairs of the war," he continued, "and the problems which may present themselves after peace. The greatest part of the conversations was devoted to the necessity of winning the war and on this theme was centered cooperation between Brazil and the United States, which is an integral cooperation without restrictions.

"Once we are at war our cooperation is complete. All that the United States may judge necessary we will continue to give."

High Brazilian and United States military, naval and air force officers attended the conferences devoted to discussion of Brazil's part in the United Nations war program in line with the Roosevelt-Churchill agreements previously reached at Casablanca.

The two presidents, representing the largest American republics, personally inspected great air bases and military and naval installations on a long afternoon tour.

Arrives in U. S. Plane

President Vargas arrived at Natal late Wednesday afternoon in a four-motored United States military transport plane from Rio de Janeiro. He disembarked at the military airport and immediately went aboard the destroyer which had dropped anchor in the winding river off Natal.

President Roosevelt arrived in his great flying boat Thursday morning, landing at the seaplane base adjoining the river port.

During the conferences on the destroyer and while the Presidents were inspecting the installations, a constant patrol of bombers and fighters ranged overhead and far out to sea.

Vargas and Roosevelt participated in three separate conferences during the day and evening.

At the end of the afternoon, the Presidents and other officials went ashore to visit the city. The streets were lined with cheering throngs despite the declaration of a business holiday in the hope that the center of the city would be relatively free of crowds.

The Presidents maintained animated conversations during the inspections which were principally devoted to the airfield outside the city where warplanes jumped off for Africa and the active war theaters.

They then had dinner aboard the destroyer and resumed the conferences.

They engaged in another brief, private conference this morning before Vargas started back to the capital.

Traveling with Vargas were Rear Admiral Jones Ingram, commander of the Allied naval forces in the south Atlantic; Brig. Gen. Robert Walsh, chief of the south Atlantic wing of the Air Transport Command; United States Ambassador Jefferson Caffrey, United States Consul Harold Simms of Natal, and various military advisers.

Text of Statement

The joint statement made public by the White House in Washington follows:

"The President of Brazil and the President of the United States met Thursday at an unannounced location in Brazil. The two Presidents had lunch together, inspected and reviewed army, navy and air forces of the two nations. They passed the evening in conference on problems of the World War as a whole and especially the joint Brazilian-United States effort.

"They discussed the continuing submarine danger from the Caribbean to the South Atlantic. President Vargas announced greatly increased efforts on the part of his country to meet this menace.

"President Roosevelt informed his colleague of the very significant results of the conference in Casablanca and of the resolve that the peace to come must not allow the Axis to attack civilization in future years. President Roosevelt demonstrated that the North African expedition has for the present eliminated the possibility of the threat of a German-held Dakar to American freedom at the narrow point of the Atlantic. Both President Vargas and President Roosevelt are in complete agreement that it must be permanently and definitely assured that the coasts of West Africa and Dakar never again under any circumstances be allowed to become a blockade or an invasion threat against the two Americas.

"The two Presidents said:

"'This meeting has given us an opportunity to survey the future safety of all the Americas. In our opinion each of the republics is interested and affected to an equal degree. In unity there is strength. It is the aim of Brazil and of the United States to make the Atlantic Ocean safe for all. We are deeply grateful for the almost unanimous help that our neighbors are giving to the great cause of democracy throughout the world.'"

This statement was supplemented by the following "memorandum for the press" from President Roosevelt alone:

"President Roosevelt believed that the Casablanca conference was so vital to the war effort that he should delay for a short time his return to the United States so that he might talk informally to President Vargas of Brazil about the conference, and discuss several details of additional mutual aid.

"President Roosevelt on his journey to Africa and on his return has had many opportunities to visit and inspect vital points of the ferry command which is doing a most difficult job every day in sending planes and quantities of vital equipment from America to the Middle East, to North Africa, to Russia, to the air squadrons in China, and to the Burma front."

The White House then added the following:

"The Presidents of the two nations—the United States and Brazil—are old friends and their talks were timely and profitable in every way."

Lend-Lease Called Vital Victory Factor

Food Up 1.2%

Living Cost Rises .5% In December

Secretary of Labor Perkins yesterday announced that the cost of living surged higher in the month ending December 15. The over-all increase for the month was placed at one-half per cent, but this was compounded from the prices of many commodities.

The index figure for all foods rose 1.2 per cent during the month. Those not controlled by the Office of Price Administration—like fresh fruit and vegetables—went up 7 per cent.

Since last May 12, the announcement said, the price of all foods has risen an average of 9.1 per cent. Those not controlled by OPA went up 29.9 per cent.

During the month ending December 15, employment reached an all-time high of 38,956,000. Manufacturers, chiefly war plants, took on 235,000 more workers in the month. Contract and Federal construction employment declined 9 per cent, or about 170,000.

Meanwhile, the Department of Agriculture said farm prices had reached a general level 15 per cent above parity, the highest since 1920. These prices, said the department, are still going up.

Stettinius Asks Congress to Keep Supplies Going

By Alex H. Singleton
Associated Press Staff Writer

Lend-Lease Administrator Edward R. Stettinius, jr., called on Congress yesterday to maintain the mutual-aid supply lines between this Nation and its Allies for another year, terming the lend-lease program a vital factor in forcing an "unconditional surrender" of the Axis.

As the House Foreign Affairs Committee began consideration of the act's renewal in peaceful contrast to the bitter controversies of its inception two years ago, the white-haired administrator declared flatly:

"If there is any question to be debated in connection with the Lend-Lease Act, it is, to my mind, the question of why we have not sent more to our Allies, not whether we should continue to send supplies to them."

Rogers Praises Act

From young Representative Will Rogers, jr., (Democrat), California, a soldier on active duty until his election to the House and now a freshman member of the committee, came this observation:

"I came here from the Army. I appreciate lend-lease because it was aiding the men at whose side I was going to fight. It was, so to speak, holding my left flank and my right flank. I was grateful to Congress for passing it and grateful to you, sir, for its able administration."

Both Republican and Democratic committee members commended Stettinius' outline of lend-lease work.

"I hope you've noticed all the Republicans have said nice things about you," Chairman Bloom (Democrat) of New York told the administrator with a smile.

Under questioning by Representative Eberharter (Democrat) of Pennsylvania, Stettinius said beer and powder-puffs have never been shipped by the United States under the lend-lease program.

In the House Thursday, Representative Jones (Republican) of Ohio said that thousands of cases of beer, rayon stockings, and powder-puffs had been shipped abroad, and paid for with lend-lease money. Later lend-lease officials denied the shipping of any beer or powder-puffs but said a small quantity of rayon stockings were bought as a necessary part of a deal to get cotton stockings to distribute in North Africa.

"Impregnable Base

Stettinius reported that lend-lease aid had made the British Isles "an impregnable base for offensive operations" and reviewed the shipments of war material and equipment to Britain, Russia, Africa, Egypt and China. He told also how lend-lease operates in reverse, bringing supplies to American troops in the field and in billets abroad.

But this point he stressed in particular—"there has not been and there never will be developed a standard of values by which we can measure lives lost against the cost of airplanes or guns."

"It is difficult," he said, "to estimate how much the peoples of Russia have helped us by holding back the Nazi forces and taking the offensive away from them, or to estimate the value to our national interests of the superb fight of the Chinese against the Japanese.

"By the lives lost, the cities and homes destroyed and in the other losses of war, Russia and China and Great Britain have made limitless contributions to their cause, as well as to ours."

There were some questions which Stettinius left to be answered later in executive session for reasons of military secrecy, chief among them inquiries into how much aid is being sent China, why the Chinese mission left this country, and how much of the Lend-Lease aid is reaching its destination.

Speaking of aid which the Allies are giving this country, he said that Australia is furnishing practically all the food consumed by our men in the South Pacific area, is expanding her food program to supply the southwest Pacific area, has supplied camps, airfields, repair depots, a complete tire rebuilding and maintenance plant and numerous other items.

From New Zealand, he said, great quantities of food had been supplied to American troops.

U. S. Fliers Down Nine Jap Planes

States fighters, whose pilots brought down nine Zeros and probably shot down another half dozen. Four United States fighters did not return to their base.

The same day United States Air Forces struck back, sending a force of Martin Marauder medium bombers, escorted by Bell Airacobra fighters, to Kolombangara Island in the New Georgias. Bombs from the Marauders started large fires ashore, and all United States airplanes returned.

Foes' Fleet Attacked

That night a force of Douglas Dauntless dive-bombers and Grumman Avenger torpedo planes, with an escort of Grumman Wildcat fighters, attacked an enemy destroyer and a cargo vessel in Vella Gulf. The cargo ship was left burning from two direct hits and the destroyer was smoking when last seen.

Next day a force of Dauntless dive bombers escorted by Lockheed Lightning fighters returned to Kolombangara and attacked an enemy fleet 15 miles northeast of the island. A cargo ship was hit by a bomb and near hits were scored on a tanker. The cargo ship and the tanker were left dead in the water, the tanker smoking.

Four Zeros attempted to intercept and lost one to the Lightnings. All United States aircraft returned.

Text of Navy communique No. 265 follows:

South Pacific (all dates are east longitude):

1. On January 27:

(a) Ground operations on Guadalcanal Island resulted in the capture of a large, well-established enemy command post. Thirty-six Japanese were killed and three prisoners and a large amount of enemy equipment were captured. In other sectors two pockets of enemy resistance were wiped out.

(b) During the morning enemy dive bombers and high-level bombers, escorted by fighters, approached Guadalcanal. United States fighters engaged the enemy planes and incomplete reports indicate that nine Zeros were destroyed and six others probably destroyed. The enemy planes dropped no bombs. Four United States planes were missing.

(c) A force of Marauder (Martin B-26) medium bombers, with Airacobra (Bell P-39) escort, bombed enemy installations on Kolombangara Island in the New Georgia group. A large fire was started. All U. S. planes returned.

Direct Hits Scored

(d) During the evening, a force of Dauntless (Douglas) dive bombers and Avenger (Grumman TBF) torpedo planes with Wildcat (Grumman F4F) escort attacked an enemy destroyer and a cargo ship in the Vella Gulf. Two direct hits were scored on the cargo ship which was left sinking. Bombs fell close to the destroyer which was left smoking.

2. On Jan 28:

(a) During the afternoon, a force of Dauntless dive bombers and Avenger torpedo planes with lightning (Lockheed P-38) escort attacked Japanese ships about 15 miles northeast of Kolombangara Island. A torpedo hit caused a large explosion on an enemy destroyer. One bomb hit and several near hits were scored on a cargo ship and near hits on a tanker were observed. The cargo ship and tanker were left dead in the water. The tanker was last seen smoking. One of the four enemy Zeros which intercepted was shot down. All U. S. planes returned.

Bedroom Door Introduced In Flynn Trial

By Frederick C. Othman
United Press Staff Writer

Hollywood, Jan. 29.—Police lugged into court today the bedroom door behind which 17-year-old Betty Hansen claims Errol Flynn subjected her to statutory rape.

The door, wrapped in a gray blanket, had been unscrewed from its hinges in the home of Fred McEvoy. Since the trial started three weeks ago the lawyers have been arguing whether it was locked or unlocked during Miss Hansen's alleged experience.

As court reconvened after lunch Flynn remarked to reporters that his telephone had been tapped.

"There must be an awfully old dictaphone attached to it," he said. "The buzzing and clicking have been almost deafening. But since I discovered it, I've been having a lot of fun talking to it."

Leland B. Jones, police chemist, testified he removed the door from the blue bedroom in the McEvoy house. Then he produced microphotographs indicating that someone had tampered with the lock. He identified marks on the shank of the bolt as having been made with a file.

Defense Attorney Jerry Giesler inspected the exhibit carefully while Jones was testifying. He patted the door, spun the broken lock and waited until the witness had finished.

"And would you say, Mr. Jones," he asked, "that there was tampering with this lock yesterday, ar last year, or 10 years ago?"

"I have no idea," said Jones.

Astronomer Testifies

The prosecution called C. H. Cleminshaw, dignified acting director of the Griffith Park Observatory, who demonstrated with a celestial globe that the moon was low the night Flynn and Peggy La Rue Satterlee returned from Catalina Island aboard his yacht, and could have been seen easily from a porthole.

The State alleged that Flynn lured Miss Satterlee to a cabin to look at the moon, then attacked her.

Under cross-examination by Giesler, however, Cleminshaw was forced to admit that if the yacht were headed north, as previous testimony indicated, the moon would have been astern and Peggy couldn't have seen it.

The defense called Miss Stella Green, housekeeper at the McEvoy home. The State contended Flynn's voice and a girl's giggle were heard from behind a locked bedroom door. The defense said the lock on the door was broken.

Miss Greene was not sure.

Jeffers Given WPB Clearance For Rubber

cent of his butadiene plants, and more than 60 per cent of his styrene plants, on the directive, but only 51.5 per cent of final-stage copolymer plants.

(Butadiene mixed with styrene in a copolymer plant results in the production of synthetic rubber.)

If Jeffers' final-stage plants produce above capacity, greater production of rubber will be secured. Some experts believe that plants under the directive eventually will produce at last 55 per cent of the total Buna S program.

In preparing the directive, Nelson made sure that all phases of the progra mwere fairly balanced. An earlier 20 per cent directive was used by Jeffers to step up butadiene plants only, leaving the rest of the program lagging. In stepping up the directive, Nelson included no additional butadiene plants, it was learned.

It should be made clear, however, that the granting of the directive for 452,000 tons of the total program does not mean that the rest of the program is being abandoned. On the contrary, the other parts of the program will be given a chance to come in behind the favored portions with normal priorities treatment.

Another factor to be weighed is the belief of many technical experts that some of the plants have been underrated, and that they will eventually produce a great deal more rubber than their rated capacity calls for. It is understood that this factor was taken into consideration in cutting down Jeffers' estimates.

The special directive issued by Nelson provided the urgency rating to 10,000 tons of the neoprene program and 7000 tons of the butyl program, in addition to the 435,000 tons of Buna S. Butyl and neoprene rubber is used primarily for special purposes, rather than tires. Thiokol, another synthetic which has a place in the program, was not given any special direction.

The directive lists plants in Jeffers' program which are entitled to critical components ahead of all other programs. Any manufacturer who finds that an order from Jeffers conflicts with another order on his books will be instructed to get in touch with the War Production Board by telegram.

Immediate Oil Needs Here Can Be Met—PAW

The fuel oil supply in Washington is sufficient to take care of immediate needs, a spokesman for the Petroleum Administration for War revealed yesterday after a check of stocks held by primary dealers.

Definite figures were not made public, but he said their survey showed each of the primary dealers had on the average 8000 barrels.

"The Standard Oil Co. has the lowest stocks, but since making the check, it is probable the company has been able to replenish its supplies," he said.

He explained that the over-all picture of oil was definitely not satisfactory, but also that it was not serious.

Situation to Remain Tight

"Until sufficient pipelines can be built to bring the oil into the East or tankers can again resume service, the oil situation is going to remain tight. You can expect local emergencies to arise, but we will do our best to anticipate them or find a remedy if we fail to do that," he said.

He had reference to such a condition as now prevails in this area due to ice-covered streets and roads which still hamper deliveries of oil. It is feared this condition will retard the shipment of oil to Washington by truck. However, stocks in the city, with careful use, can be made to last until the roads clear, it is believed.

Petroleum Administrator Harold Ickes said that during the week ending January 23 developments were neither better nor worse than had been anticipated. Petroleum stocks remained close to the minimum working level on the East coast, he said.

Tank car shipments dropped 19,779 barrels a day as total shipments for the week reached 798,552 barrels a day. The release of more cars to haul the fuel was promised with the opening of an emergency pipeline at Randolph, Ohio, from where it will be delivered to the East coast. The gasoline supply will remain the same but cars previously used to haul it will be switched to the delivery of oil.

Emergency in Boston

Barge movements continued at high levels.

In Boston a state of emergency was declared by Regional OPA Administrator Kenneth B. Backman over a large section of New England due to a serious shortage of kerosene for home heating.

He declared the shortage endangered the public health, the public welfare and the war effort.

Given first priority in the order are emergencies involving "serious threat to life and health;" then, in order, homes having space heaters but no central heating system, applying to many tenement houses; homes with central heating systems dependent exclusively on kerosene; consumers using kerosene for cooking purposes; industries using kerosene in critical processes.

As an example of the seriousness of the kerosene shortage, Backman said that on Wednesday morning Boston had only a half-day's supply on hand.

Emergency Fuel Oil Priorities Provided For in New Order

Broad authority to establish priorities among fuel-oil consumers in the East Coast shortage area in an emergency "which endangers the public health or welfare or the war effort" was extended yesterday to regional administrators of the Office of Price Administration.

This delegation gives a regional administrator authority to restrict deliveries of fuel oil in any manner he finds necessary to meet the emergency, regardless of other provisions of OPA fuel-oil rationing regulations.

The order, it was pointed out, would give Whitney Leary, the District of Columbia administrator, authority to declare, in an emergency, just what classes of consumers would be permitted to obtain fuel oil and which, if any, would find their supplies cut off.

The action was taken, OPA said, "in view of the gravity of the fuel oil shortage in the Eastern area. Since the regional administrators will have close knowledge of the circumstances creating an emergency in any particular community, it is desirable to permit them to issue limited-period emergency orders declaring the existence of the emergency and directing transfers of fuel oil to consumers in the order of priority or under such limitations as they may designate."

The authority is specifically limited to the 17 Eastern States and the District of Columbia. Regional administrators whose jurisdiction extends to these States are located at Boston, New York, Atlanta and Cleveland.

The regional administrators have authority to set up emergency restrictions on deliveries in any one locality or for an entire State or region as long as the emergency zone is within the East Coast area. The emergency action may restrict, for example, the amount of oil that a consumer may buy at a time, may specify hours of delivery, or may establish priority among users.

The delegation applies to all sales of fuel oil to consumers and supplements the priority list issued by the petroleum administrator for war as schedule A. The PAW schedule applies only to fuel oil used for nonheating purposes by commercial, industrial and governmental users. OPA said regional administrators, in any action they might take, would be expected to conform to PAW priorities.

Boston Bombers Attack French Rail Line of Axis

London, Jan. 29 (AP).—American-built Boston Bombers joined in the air offensive against Axis U-boats today when, as part of big daylight sweeps over occupied territory, they struck at the railway life line running across France to the German submarine base at Brest.

Their target was the important 300-foot high viaduct at Morlaix in Brittany, over which runs the main rail track to Brest. An air ministry communique did not disclose the results of the raid.

In other daylight sweeps—which cost Britain one bomber and three fighters and the Germans five fighters, including two Junkers 88s in the Bay of Biscay—American medium bombers smashed at objectives in Ijmuiden, Holland; Spitfires kept up attacks on communications in Northern France and Belgium, shooting up trains and barges, and torpedo bombers sank a large German supply ship off Norway.

OPA Picks Dawson To Be Congress Liaison Officer

By the Associated Press

Price Administrator Prentiss Brown, drawing on his experience as a former Senator in an apparent attempt to avert congressional criticism, yesterday assigned Edward Dawson of OPA as a liaison official with Congress.

Dawson has rooms in the Senate and House Office buildings. An associate indicated that his job will be to keep the Senators and Representatives satisfied with the OPA.

Specifically, Dawson is available to help solve, or at least answer, the problems that constituents are always reporting to their Congressmen.

While a small staff may be able to answer many routine questions as soon as they arise, Dawson himself already has made personal contacts with the legislators to work out larger problems, such as the administration of State OPA organizations that may come under criticism.

Boy Admits Pushing Chum in Front of Train

Cranston, R. I., Jan. 29 (AP).—Police Sergt. John F. Ryan said last night an 11-year-old boy had admitted pushing Clinton Place, jr., 11, into the path of a railway locomotive January 14 and then robbing the body of a wrist watch, dollar bill and a purse containing 5 cents.

Car-Sharing In D. C. Fails, AAA Declares

Washington's share-the-car program was termed a failure yesterday by the District Division of the American Automobile Association, which reported the average passenger car carried only 2.06 persons last month, entering and leaving the downtown business district, as compared with 1.9 persons in June, 1942.

But the A. A. A. statement didn't tell District traffic and civilian defense officials anything they didn't already know.

Actually, Washington has had no share-the-car program for four months. Originally directed by the consumer committee of the civilian mobilization division, the program was dropped last fall pending organization of the block leader corps, in whose lap the problem child was to be placed.

Since then, however, it has been turned over to the war transportation committee, a civilian defense auxiliary headed by William A. Van Duzer, director of vehicles and traffic, which currently is trying to get the OPA to recognize Government agencies as war industries in order to provide a broader working basis for the share-the-car program.

A conference for this purpose, Van Duzer said yesterday, will be held Monday afternoon with OPA officials. If recognition is forthcoming, he added, the project will be prosecuted through transportation committees in each agency, which will certify bona fide participating employes for supplemental gas rations.

The A. A. A. report, based on a survey made with the assistance of Boy Scouts, said that holders of B and C gasoline coupons had only a fractionally better record in carrying passengers than the A holders and suggested, inasmuch as applicants for supplemental rations must enter into car-sharing programs if at all possible, the advisability "of some sort of check-up to determine why people with supplemental rations are not filling their cars as required under the regulations."

Comment on this angle was not available from the District OPA because of the illness of its administrator, Whitney Leary.

Russell E. Singer, general manager of the A. A. A., declared the survey "indicates that a great deal of potential transportation space is being wasted. We have a long way to go before we can say that automobiles of Washington and surrounding territory are being used to maximum capacity."

U. S. Orders Yard to Build Ships or Quit

By Dillard Stokes
Post Staff Writer

The Maritime Commission yesterday ordered the South Portland (Maine) Shipbuilding Corp., to build 12 Liberty ships in the next 60 days, on pain of losing its two Government-built yards and about 130 million dollars worth of war orders.

The corporation accepted the ultimatum.

A commission announcement said the company was being given one more chance to step up production to a rate which would insure completion of 70 ships by the corporation this year. Even if this is done, the company's fees will be sharply reduced, as a penalty for past bungling.

The commission's crack-down followed bungling administration, which included a series of disputes with unions, which slowed up production. A new management took control on January 4.

The South Portland shipyards are run by a company formed by merger of two large Government-built plants there. Their contracts, which were first let in April, 1941, call for construction of 84 vessels. Only 14 have been finished.

The commission's order yesterday required the company to turn out 12 ships by March 20, to demonstrate satisfactory performance in steel fabrication, ways construction and ship delivery and to forfeit all profit on the first 16 ships contracted for.

If this is done, the South Portland firm will be allowed to keep its contracts for a total of 68 vessels, but must give up half its profits.

The company's difficulties provoked recent inquiries by House and Senate committees. The Truman Committee advised termination of the contracts, but the commission said yesterday that 60 days more would be granted.

Flynn Lacks 3 Votes, Test Shows

a time when unity is most desirable.". He made this statement in reply to Senator Connally of Texas, Foreign Relations Committee chairman, and others, who have maintained that the Senate should not harass the President by rejecting his appointment.

Byrd called upon the Senate to discharge its constitutional obligation to weigh the nomination "as an independent branch of the Government." He said he had reached the conclusion that "Mr. Flynn will not be helpful to our war effort in the Pacific and will be resented by our ally, Australia."

Byrd was the fourth influential Democratic Senator publicly to make known his opposition to Flynn, although six other Democracts, including Senator McCarran of Nevada, are counted in the anti-Flynn column. Senators George of Georgia, Van Nuys of Indiana and Gillette of Iowa voted against Flynn in the Foreign Relations Committee.

Withdrawal Predicted

Eight Senators have already been paired in advance of the Senate vote, although one of them, Senator Reynolds (Democrat) of North Carolina, who is paired with McCarran, expects to remain in Washington. The effect of pairing, usually done by Senators who wish to be recorded on a record vote taken in their absence, would be to reduce the number of voting Senators to 88. The absence of Senator Glass (Democrat) of Virginia, who is ill, would reduce the total vote to 87.

Glass has not yet been paired, but he is likely to be before the vote is taken. Among the 86 remaining Senators there should be a minimum of 43 votes against Flynn, excluding eight Senators, two or more of whom are expected to vote "no."

On both sides, reports persisted last night that the Flynn nomination would be withdrawn. There was no comment from Flynn, and no indication by Administration leaders in the Senate that they did not believe they could turn the Senate tide back toward the man who managed President Roosevelt's third-term campaign.

Bus Ride Did It

Hornblow Jolted Back Into Print

By Homer Hornblow

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Hornblow, who hasn't written a line since completing his unsuccessful search for the last District voter, bounced into the city room yesterday shaking as if he had stepped from a tank—an Army tank—that is a war machine.)

Three buses were lined up orderly enough at the depot in Silver Spring at 9:55 a. m. yesterday. Persons were climbing aboard. I got in the first one, but, unlike some others, didn't find a seat.

The trip through Maryland to the District Line station had been uneventful, smooth riding over snow packed hard on the roads. So, how was a Joe like me to know that I shouldn't have been standing up in the aisle with my hands in my pockets. No, I should have been clutching to the rail on the back of a seat like a Joe riding in a jeep!

The driver let out the clutch and I moved back to the rear. Moved back like the Germans from Stalingrad. Some funny Joe said, "Ride him, cowboy!" I swung to a halt on a rail in the back. We were off!

If it looked from the outside, like it felt on the inside, this bouncing motorcade was a sight to see. Alaska Avenue was rougher than the Alcan Highway and Sixteenth Street was no improvement. The icy surface was pocketed with deep holes, gouged by spinning auto wheels.

The buses jumped, bumped and humped.

Stops were little relief and there was no consolation in the fact that approximately 30 other passengers were also apparently being jarred apart. Vibration of the riders was lessened as the bus filled to capacity along the line.

The character who was jammed against me as we pulled away from the stop at Sixteenth and Harvard was in a low condition. He said he had gone through the same thing on the way home from work less than 12 hours before.

At the Statler Hotel corner, the intrepid driver of our lead bus swung off Sixteenth and seemingly leaped through the air and landed on K. It was a neat maneuver, but some of the passengers were not used to high flying. The driver had set an example of how not to cross the intersection and the other two buses followed at a snail's pace and crept over ruts cut deep by K Street traffic.

The ride was nearing an end. Ice which paralyzed the Capital's transportation system and did thousands of dollars' damage to street surfaces had failed to separate the three buses. Our bond was broken only by the almost impassable ridges of slush at Thirteenth Street and New York Avenue. An earlier bus was marooned in the intersection. Its passengers were gone and workmen were trying to free it when our bus passed at 10:35. A traffic light delayed the other buses.

At Thirteenth and E, I filed out and was thinking it could never be so rough on the testing grounds for armored trucks at Aberdeen, Md., as it was on Washington Streets yesterday.

D. C. High Schools Graduate 396 At Ceremonies

Midyear graduation exercises were conducted yesterday by nine senior and junior high schools which awarded diplomas to 712 students.

Three hundred and ninety-six of the graduates received their diplomas from the senior schools, as follows: Central, 114; Western, 74; Coolidge, 86; Cordoza, 48; Armstrong, 38, and Dunbar, 36.

The balance were junior high school graduates. Deal awarded diplomas to 125 students; Powell, 81, and Shaw, 110.

The Board of Education was represented at most ceremonies, with the principals awarding the diplomas.

Earlier in the day, 22 students, all pupils of Mrs. Helen Kiernan-Vasa, were graduated from Webster Americanization School.

Miss Mary M. Brame, 32, of 815 Eighteenth Street Northwest, sustained a possibly fractured back when she slipped on the ice while entering her apartment. At Emergency Hospital where she is being detained her condition is said to be serious. Rebecca Price of 4530 Cathedral Avenue Northwest, was found to have a broken ankle at Georgetown Hospital suffered when she fell on the ice at Wisconsin and Dumbarton Avenues.

Suffers Broken Bone

William H. Tippet, 45, of Herndon, Va., sustained a broken shin bone, at Emergency Hospital, as the result of a fall on the ice, and Neal Varts, 63, of 405 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest, was treated for head cuts also sustained in a fall, at the same hospital. Both were discharged

Suzanne Haar, 14, of 419 Ninth Street Northeast, sustained a fractured left leg when she stumbled and fell on the icy pavement while walking along Ninth Street near Florida Avenue. She was admitted to Casualty Hospital, where her condition was described as fair.

Fourteenth Street Bridge was ordered closed as the hillocks of ice frozen to the bridge flooring caused dangerous vibration as trucks, buses and cars jounced over them.

Despite some improvement in condition, hillocks of ice still cluttered the streets. In addition District Highway Department officials said the streets were being damaged considerably and that it would be necessary to resurface some of them.

William A. Xanten, superintendent of refuse, succeeded in securing 140 extra men to help clean the streets, but they were handicapped by the fact that the 94 snowplows in the District were helpless against the lumps of ice frozen to the pavement.

Garbage collections were discontinued for the time being as all of the trucks in the city were required to move the piles of snow that dammed the gutters and created icy pools.

In Montgomery County, State, suburban and county roads were open last night and in good shape, with the exception of a few roads in special taxing areas which are not serviced by the county.

County Commissioner William H. Prescott took personal charge of the cleanup work in the Western Suburban District, which includes Bethesda and Chevy Chase except for several special taxing areas. Ten county trucks and 20 men and 12 State Roads Commission trucks with 30 men worked two nights and days to clear the roads.

W. C. Blundon, Realty Man, Ends Own Life

"Suicide by hanging" was the verdict of Deputy Coroner Christopher J. Murphy yesterday after an investigation of the death of William C. Blundon, 63, retired local real estate dealer.

Blundon was found suspended from a sash cord knotted over a steel girder in the basement of his home, 1324 Jonquil Street Northwest, at 6:45 a. m. by his sister-in-law, Mrs. Gertrude Blundon.

She ran to a neighbor's home and with the aid of Mrs. Lula Powell summoned police and a doctor. Blundon was dead when a physician arrived from Emergency Hospital.

Members of the family told police Blundon had been in ill health for several months, and was released from a Rockville (Md.) rest home only last Monday.

He was prominent in local real estate circles for about 40 years. A native Wasingtonian, he is survived by his wife, Mrs. Ona Bludon, and two sisters, Mrs. Mary L. Acton and Mrs. Laura Esterly.

Manpower Plan Mapped For Railroads

Joseph B. Eastman, director of the Office of Defense Transportation, yesterday announced a 13-point railroad manpower program which includes elimination of some of the peacetime work-spreading devices known as the "feather-bed rules."

The program was adopted by a conference of management and labor representatives with ODT, and is to be put into effect by the carriers and rail unions by negotiation, railroad by railroad, ODT said.

The conference was held in Washington Thursday.

The program called for relaxation of yard rules which forbid crews delivering cars to yards of tracks of other roads to return with their engines pulling a load. In the past, this work-of reading device has operated to compel railroads to use two locomotives for operations where one would have been sufficient.

The program also called for relaxation of mileage limitations on the road, and hourly limitations in yards which have restricted the time an employe could work.

These restrictions have been built into railroad labor contracts over many years. Railroad operators have contended that they could make a substantial saving in manpower and operating costs if they were permitted to scrap the restrictive rules.

The conferees emphasized, however, that they were not changing existing contracts by adopting this program. They said that any changes required would be made by agreement between individual roads and the recognized rail labor unions.

Other phases of the program included an agreement to hold absenteeism to a minimum, to provide for continued employment of men eligible for retirement as long as they are physically able, to provide for upgrading in jobs to higher skills, protecting original seniority, and to encourage return of retired workers.

More equitable distribution of overtime, more intensive training programs, provisions for transfer from one job to another, relaxation of age and physical requirements wherever possible, and wider employment of women, particularly members of employes' families, were other points endorsed.

The union officials made it clear that they were approving the program "for the duration only," with normal working standards to be restored with peacetime.

"The railroad presidents and railroad labor executives comprising the labor and management committees," Eastman said, "have approached the difficult problems of railroad manpower in a spirit of genuine cooperation. If the principles agreed upon are applied in the same spirit, as I am confident they will be, the program should be of real assistance in meeting the manpower needs of the railroads."

is the maximum that can be paid. It could be earned by all salary brackets, however, since a section limiting the aggregate of base pay and overtime to $5000 is to be eliminated.

4. Certain top-salaried groups such as agency heads, Cabinet members, Congressmen and Federal judges would be excluded by specific mention.

5. The 10 per cent raise given nonovertime workers by the temporary law would be increased to 15 per cent.

6. Postal workers, covered by the temporary law, would be excluded and provided for in separate legislation.

Mrs. Marie Towns Hope, wife of Jim Hope, is seeking $2300 from Bob through an assignee. She contends she was the comedian's part-time secretary, working with her husband, at $12.50 a week and was paid only $25 in all.

Expert's Finding

Four Defects In Congress Setup Cited

Four defects in the internal organization of Congress and three fundamental faults in the structure of the United States Constitution were cited last night by George Galloway, of the Twentieth Century Fund, as his part of the answer to the recurring question: "What's Wrong With Congress?"

Speaking in the Department of Commerce Auditorium before the initial session of the American Political Science Association's conference, which is being held in connection with the group's thirty-eighth annual business meeting, Galloway enumerated the organizational defects as follows:

1. The committee system is "obsolete, duplicative and dispersive; inefficient for peacetime purposes and quite unequal to the requirements of wartime."

2. Congress has failed "to equip itself adequately with unbiased sources of information."

3. There is no unity of command. "Congress is a body without a head. Authority and responsibility are scattered among the chairmen of the standing committees."

4. Congress has no protection against pressure groups, whose operation "is a formidable handicap to fair and efficient government," and its members likewise are not protected against the claims of constituents, for whom they frequently are nothing more than "errand boys."

Made Study of Problem

The speaker, who served as chairman of a political science association committee named two years ago to inquire into the problems of modernizing Congress, offered this definition of what he regards as the "three fundamental faults in the structure" of the Constitution:

"First, it divides legislative power equally between a House and a Senate, producing deadlocks and delays. Second, it does not give the President power to dissolve the Congress. And, third, it does not give Congress power to dismiss the Executive."

Galloway canvassed numerous proposals which have been suggested as remedies for the organizational defects he mentioned, and left the impression that anything that would solve the problems, without at the same time creating new ones, would help modernize a Congress whose "political inertia" he termed "a powerful and massive obstacle to proposed legislative reforms."

Relies on Public Opinion

Effective action in putting through the reforms, he said, "must ultimately rest on an aroused and sustained public opinion." He saw hope that the results of last fall's elections might make the Seventy-eighth Congress "more inquiring, more critical and more assertive of its prerogatives.

"Perhaps, at long last," he declared, "Congress will now undertake, by modernizing its internal machinery, to equip itself to play a truly great part at this crucial stage in the history of the Republic."

Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney of Wyoming another speaker, differed with Galloway on many of his points and defended many of the things which the latter criticized. He said that the average ability of Congressmen was pretty high, that ability was fairly evenly distributed and that the method of allocating committee chairmanships on a basis of seniority—which eliminates dickering and log-rolling among the members—usually worked out in such a manner that able men are chosen.

Other speakers last night were Roland Young, Harvard professor, who replied to O'Mahoney, and Representative John R. Murdock of Arizona, who took a position somewhat similar to that of the Senator.

The conference, which will continue through Sunday, will resume at 10 a. m. today with a round-table discussion on geopolitics.

Laws Urges Revised Rules Of Sentencing

Reporting that Lorton Reformatory officials had 20 times more information about an inmate about to be placed in the laundry or foundry "than I had when I was forced to sentence him," Justice Bolitha J. Laws yesterday said that procedures for sentencing convicted felons are wholly inadequate to meet the needs of war time.

Speaking to the Washington Criminal Justice Association, whose support of proposed changes in the Federal sentencing system he solicited, Justice Laws declared:

"Perhaps the most difficult task facing any judge is sentencing a person convicted of serious crime. Under the present system, a judge may see a person for only five minutes, and yet may have to determine his life's destiny."

Provisional System

Under the proposed system, recommended by a committee composed of Chief Justice Harlan Stone and seven Federal jurists, of whom Justice Laws was one, the presiding judge would sentence the offender povisionally for the maximum term provided by law in all cases where the judge thinks a sentence of more than one year is indicated. Robbery, for example, in the District, would be mandatory for 15 years.

"Thereafter," the speaker said, "a board of correction will make an intensive study of the social history of the offender, and will make recommendations to the judge as to the final sentence. It may be only one year, or even less. Adult offenders will be under parole supervision, however, for two years after release from any institution."

Justice Laws expressed belief that a vital change in sentencing procedures will be needed to meet postwar needs. "The economic and social upheaval caused by the war," he said, "undoubtedly will bring many men back from foreign countries who have been taught to murder and to plunder out of necessity. Many of these men will be suffering mental ills.

"Postwar problems will place a great burden on the unfortunate man who comes before a judge," he continued. "With a complete investigation by a board of correction, the judge will know best the type of institution to which he should be committed, or whether he should be committed at all. The proposal plan provides not only treatment, but rehabilitation and greater protection for the public."

Quarterly Report Given

Meeting in the Willard Hotel, with Eugene Meyer, president, presiding, the association learned from the quarterly report of its managing director, Dr. James A. Nolan, that major crimes decreased here during 1942, despite an expanded population, although an increase in misdemeanors was reported. The 1942 jail admissions—21,000—exceeded those of any other year, he said.

Dr. Nolan reported an increase in juvenile delinquency, particularly among children 14 and under, and suggested that the association's directors give their attention to local "deficiencies" in dealing with youthful offenders. War and its aftermath, he pointed out, give rise to factors disturbing to young people.

'Commandos,' at the Earle, 'Strike at Dawn,' But Hard!

Paul Muni and Splendid Cast Depict Perils of Norwegian Village Under Nazis; Romo Vincent Tops Diverting Stage Bill

"COMMANDOS STRIKE AT DAWN." Lester Cowan's picturization for Columbia of a story by C. S. Forester, adapted to the screen by Irwin Shaw, starring Paul Muni, with Anna Lee, Lillian Gish, Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Robert Coote, Ray Collins, Rosemary De Camp, Alexander Knox, Elisabeth Fraser, Richard Derr, Erville Alderson, Barbara Everest, Rod Cameron, Louis Jean Heydt, George Macready, Arthur Margetson, Ann Carter, Elsa Janssen, Ferdinand Munier and John Arthur Stockton. Directed by John Farrow. At the Earle Theater.

NOW THAT "Commandos Strike at Dawn" is on the screen at the Earle Theater, the public at large will have opportunity to add its acclaim to the film story that aroused the unstinted enthusiasm of a distinguished invited audience at the recent preview held in the Departmental Auditorium under the personal auspices of the Norwegian Ambassador.

That story is one which conveys more rationally and more forcefully than perhaps any other of its kind that has come to public view the full import of Nazi domination of the occupied countries and its effect upon a normally industrious and peace-loving people. Its locale is a little Norwegian fishing village of honest, industrious and simple people. As the picture opens, they are pursuing the even tenor of their ways, each contributing his measure to the happiness of the community and sharing proportionately in its sorrows. Life is pleasant and the joy of living it is epitomized in the celebration of a wedding, attended by music and gay dancing. Then without warning come the Nazis to "protect" the little town against nonexistent threats of conquest.

Eric Toresen contemplates this invasion of the people's rights with resignation, as something fleeting that will speedily pass. When murder, pillage and persecution of his friends awaken him to the realities of the situation, he perceives that the Nazi aggressors cannot be combated by peaceful means and so institutes an organized campaign of sabotage and counter-espionage in the course of which he kills the German commander.

Escaping to England by boat, he enlists the interest of the Commando forces and leads them on a raid against the secret airfield he has discovered, at the cost of his own life and the life of the brother of the English girl he was to marry.

The power of the story rests preponderantly upon its orderly progression from the tranquillity of its early scenes to the overwhelming climax of the Commando raid, without recourse to theatrical devices that might impair the integrity of the narrative as a factual, rather than fictional, record of what happens under the Nazi heel and what can be done about. Occasionally suggestive of the stage plays, "Candle in the Wind," "The Moon Is Down" and possibly "The Russian People," "Commandos Strike at Dawn" is like none of them except in the truth of its premise. It is both directed and played with fine restraint and thereby gains immeasurably in strength and authenticity. Humorous, quaintly charming and tragic, it leaves an impression of reality that few films have approached.

Muni Heads a Scrupulously Chosen Cast

In the role of Toresen, Paul Muni returns to the screen in one of his best roles and finest performances. Silent, grim and determined, once buffeted out of his delusion that all is well with him and his countrymen, he manages to express the spirit of a people rather than the individual victim of purely personal tragedies. He is surrounded by a wide range of characters, including the timorous "Quisling," interpreted by able actors who approximate, if they do not match, his skill. Anna Lee and Lillian Gish, as the principal feminine figures in the play, acquit themselves with high honor and that admirable actor, Ray Collins, the victim of his own self-deception, contributes a memorable portrayal of Bergesen, who, somehow, survives the most exquisite of the Nazi brutalities. Sir Cedric Hardwicke, a present visitor in Washington, brings authority to the role of the British naval commander and Robert Coote registers impressively as the ill-fated Robert Bowen. On the other side of the picture, Alexander Knox, recently seen on the National stage with Katharine Cornell and her star cast in the revival of Chekhov's "The Three Sisters," limns a distinguished and thoroughly distasteful likeness of the Nazi officer, executing most of the Hitlerian crimes against humanity. Numerous others add to the luster of a brilliant ensemble. The realism of the Commando attack is made sure by the participation in it of a detachment of bona fide Canadian Commandos, who bring the action to a magnificently thrilling climax.

The new stage revue at the Earle is another brief and colorful interval of varied diversion, headlined by Romo Vincent, "Mr. Five-by-Five" himself, according to his introduction in that equilateral chanty. In top voice and high good humor, the rotund Mr. Vincent yesterday garnered major honors in a series of song sketches that are the best of their kind. Next in favor was the graceful pirouetting of Carol King, familiar to Washington as one of the most gifted of the ballerinas. Bobby Whaling & Co., the latter consisting of an attractive young woman, do amazing things on a breakaway bicycle and a towering unicycle and the Roxyettes are stunningly conspicuous in a series of their most engaging routines—especially the lovely closing number with the white ostrich fans.

Jo Lombardi's orchestral interludes, with Shannon Bolin for the excellent vocals; "Paratroopers" and the usual house features complete a bill which to most will be a "must."

They Love—And Fight the Good Fight

PAUL MUNI AND ANNA LEE, costarred in the romantic fighting roles in the Columbia production of "Commandos Strike at Dawn," a vivid story of Nazi oppression in Norway, now on the screen at the Earle Theater. Lillian Gish, Sir Cedric Harwicke and Elisabeth Fraser are other important members of a strong cast in a powerful and prophetic picture

HEDDA HOPPER

Deluge Starts Again!

Hollywood, Calif., Jan. 29.—Katharine Cornell appeared in the picture "Stage Door Canteen" for nothing, after she's turned down fabulous offers from every producer in town. So again she's being deluged with picture offers, and I'll bet before the year's end rolls around Kit will be doing another picture. At least, here's hoping. . . . Spence Tracy can't seem to make up his mind. Wanting to be in New York, he planed out for Kansas City, came back the next day. Following day, took a plane for New York, where he is now. He and Katharine Hepburn will be teamed in a picture version of her New York play, "Without Love." In the meantime, "A Man Called Joe," which is to be his next picture, is waiting for him. So is Irene Dunne, who is to costar in it. . . . When Errol Flynn was reading about Frances Farmer's difficulties, he said, "Poor kid! Is she having trouble!" . . . Speaking of the Flynn case, an English wit remarked, "You know, if Errol had been generous enough to buy one dozen roses, this mess he's going through might never have happened," which reminds me of Oscar Wilde's famous remark: "Experience is the name men give their mistakes."

SPENCER TRACY

Will Be Star Yet

No, it isn't Simone Simon who's asking gentlemen to shave off their mustaches, but Ernst Lubitsch. The latest hairless one is Reggie Gardiner. Nice to see Simone back at Twentieth. When Ernst gets thru with her, they'll have another star on their hands . . . Doesn't look as tho George Brent is going into the Coast Guard. He's just rented the house Hedy Lamarr once owned, which she sold to Leslie Howard, and which was the honeymoon home of Vivien Leigh and Laurence Olivier. I'm wondering if George is aiming to spend a honeymoon there, too . . . And speaking of Hedy, she fell in love with John Loder while watching him slice turkey on Thanksgiving, at Hollywood canteen. There must be some symbolism in that, but for the life of me, I can't find it.

The Tall Bus Boy

Saturday night at the canteen, Jane Withers rushed over to Mrs. John Ford with, "That tall gentleman over there asked me to play tennis with him. Do you think I should?" Mrs. Ford looked over at the tall gentleman indicated, and said, "I think I would if I were you. That's big Bill Tilden." He was only a bus boy at the canteen! . . . Charles Laughton had the soldiers shedding tears at the same place with his Gettysburg address. Now he's booked for once a week at the canteen, and camp shows with Kay Kyser. Saturday was Kay's eighteenth consecutive Saturday.

Mother Knows Best

When Marlene Dietrich heard that her daughter was romantically interested in Richard Haydn, she sent for him and said, "I'm very happy to meet you. You'll be able to talk much more freely than you do to my daughter, because we're the same age—38—and therefore can understand each other." The rest of the conversation—unquote! Romance of Marlene and Jean Gabin is now a thing of the past also . . . No, Roz Russell and Mary Boland didn't switch houses. Roz bought the Boland house because she needed more space, but is keeping her little one for income purposes . . . Monty Woolley says, "I hope Nunnally Johnson won't ask me to live up to the title of the picture, 'Buried Alive!'" "If he does, what will you do with your beard?" he was asked. "Will it be under or on top of the soil"? . . . Kay Aldridge doesn't mind location. When she returned from the high Sierras she brought back six steaks.

LEONARD LYONS

Broadway Bulletins

New York, Jan. 29.

Apropos of this week's anniversary of National Socialism, H. G. Wells told Burnett Hershey this story of the visit made by a number of British notables to Moscow. All of them, including Lady Astor, attended a dinner given by Stalin . . . Maxim Gorki was asked by Stalin whether he knew Lady Astor's religion . . . "Free Science," replied Gorki . . . Stalin then asked him what that meant . . . "I'll ask Wells," suggested Gorki. "He knows everything" . . . The question was put to Wells, who hemmed and coughed, then answered: "Free Science, like National Socialism, is a misnomer. It's neither."

H. G. WELLS

Wells entertains his guests by serving them tea, jam, butter, cream—precious sweets which are rare in the British Isles. Wells gets these on his invalid's rations. But he can't touch any of them himself—because it's diabetes which makes him an invalid . . . He autographs books: "To the World Revolution," but then explains: "By that I don't mean the Russian or any other revolution which might pop up. Nor is it to be found in the Atlantic Charter or the Beveridge Report" . . . Beveridge, incidentally, was bewildered by the reception accorded his report. He never thought it would receive such wide publicity—for he didn't think it concerned the war program. The publicity, he revealed, disrupted his own private plan, for it meant a 2-week postponement of his wedding.

Maj. Anatole Litvak, the director of "This Above All," participated in the invasion of Casablanca . . . In New York this week, Major Litvak listened to a group of men discussing Brazil. "Brazil?" he interrupted. "I was there yesterday." From his wallet he drew a series of bills, all autographed by the people who made him a member of the Short Snorters—the club to which all people who have flown across the ocean are eligible for membership. One of the autographs was on a Brazilian bill, and had been dated only 24 hours ago.

On March 21, Carnegie Hall again will be invaded by the hepcats. Count Basie and the Cafe Society Uptown and Downtown revues will entertain there for unusual admission fees. The show will be for the benefit of an organization which is collecting watches for distribution to Russian officers. The admission fee will be one watch. A staff of 25 watch experts will be on hand for the three days preceding the concert, examining the watches and exchanging them for tickets—on the basis of "the better the watch, the better your seat."

Maxwell Anderson, who soon will leave for England and Africa as a war correspondent, went to Washington this week and arranged for his transportation. When he returned to New York City, he and his wife dined with Mr. and Mrs. Kurt Weill . . . Mrs. Anderson said she was worried about her husband's trip. "Oh, I wish my husband wouldn't travel," sighed Mrs. Anderson . . . "If that's what you wish," said Mrs. Weill, nodding toward her Berlin-born husband who soon will become naturalized, "what you need is a husband who's classed as an enemy alien."

This month the Internal Revenue Department obtained a judgment for $3000 against Orson Welles, who just doesn't know how to save any money. Welles was in debt when he worked for the WPA Theater Project; and he still was in debt when he was receiving $5000 a week for broadcasting and while he was rejecting $150,000 movie offers . . . Once, while process servers were seeking him in New York, Orson leased a hideaway apartment on West Eighty-first Street. Nobody in the neighborhood knew he lived there until one night when he came home late and discovered he had forgotten his key. He stepped through the large, heavy glass door, thereby revealed his presence to the neighbors—and the process servers found him the next day.

LOUELLA O. PARSONS

The London Incident

Hollywood, Jan. 29 (INS).—When Jack London was a newspaper reporter on the old San Francisco Examiner, in 1904, he electrified the world with his sensational scoop on the outbreak of war between the Russians and the Japanese. Jack had predicted that Japan would attack Russia and everybody laughed at him. But the Japs did make war in the same underhanded way they sneaked on Pearl Harbor! London had stowed away on a Jap fishing boat and had gone to Korea to get his story and after filing it the Japs put him in prison.

JINX FALKENBURG

The reason I mention this in such detail is that the sequence will be a sensational highlight of Samuel Bronston's United Artists movie, "Jack London," and in view of present conditions in the Pacific it should carry a tremendous wallop. Bronston, in other words, has written in this London episode.

Is the long romance between Edmund Lowe and Lady Thelma Furness waning a bit? It looks that way, for even though Eddie has dined with Thelma in New York he and Ann Savage, his pretty leading lady in the skit he's been giving at Army camps in the East, have Eastern gossip columnists convinced they are in loove.

What's more, Eddie and Ann aren't denying a thing, and she is a sad girl because Columbia has paged her to come home for "Two Senoritas From Chicago," while Eddie remains in New York. But what Ann doesn't know is that her boy friend is also being beckoned home for this same picture and will follow her to the Coast in a couple of days. "Two Senoritas From Chicago" is the musical, with Jinx Falkenburg and Joan Davis—and Eddie, of course, has the male lead.

At this writing all is sweetness and light between Twentieth Century-Fox and their problem child, George Sanders. Every once in a while George gets up his dander and refuses to do a picture and is suspended. But he is such a good actor that after he pouts a bit he is always forgiven. Kenneth McGowan has been talking with George about making a movie based on the life of Dr. Norman Bethune, the great American scientist, who developed the modern blood bank which makes it possible for blood transfusions to be given on the battlefield. These transfusions have saved countless lives and George is excited over the story and hasn't registered a single note of protest.

Metropolitan

Detouring but slightly on their hilarious journey on the "Road to Morocco," Bing Crosby, Bob Hope and Dorothy Lamour have moved directly from the Earl to the Metropolitan Theater without interrupting the continuous performance that for the past two weeks has been jamming connoisseurs of the fine art of nonsensical comedy into the Thirteenth Street theater.

There is an engaging, informal air about their latest venture into the East that more than matches their previous jaunts to "Singapore" and "Zanzibar." With Bing and Dorothy singing a pleasant song or two there is no questioning the "whys" and "wherefores" of the thinly sketched plot, but merely the abandoning of all logic to enter into the proper spirit of one of the funniest pictures of the year.

It is a heartening note, in reference to future excursions by the same cast, that Bob Hope shares equally in the spoils of the plot by being awarded possession of lovely Dona Drake, who makes a pleasant foil for his ardor.

Bulk Gas Users Given Leeway

The Office of Price Administration announced yesterday that bulk users of gasoline who have not obtained the new type bulk coupons from the ration boards could purchase gasoline on a "coupon credit basis" through next Friday.

Operators of trucks, buses, taxis, fleet cars and nonhighway vehicles are among those entitled to bulk coupons. The old type bulk coupons were invalidated last week by OPA to facilitate prevention of black market sales. Some ration boards, it was said, are still without supplies of new coupons.

Meanwhile, the order allowing use of temporary "T" ration coupons for gasoline beyond January 31 until further official notice still is in effect, provided the applicant has not yet received a war necessity certificate from ODT, and his application has not been rejected; or if he has asked for more gallonage than he had been allotted on his war necessity certificate.

Coupon No. 10 in War Ration Book No. 1, good for 3 pounds of sugar, expires tomorrow at midnight, while Coupon No. 11 becomes effective for the same amount of sugar on Monday and will run out on March 15.

Diaper Services Face Fuel Quiz

Diaper services which have not converted their plants from oil to coal were urged by Michael Shea of the Office of Civilian Supply yesterday to show their essentiality to their community and apply individually for the necessary fuel oil after the new ruling cutting use of nonheating fuel oil 40 per cent goes into effect February 2.

At the same time, fear was expressed at a meeting of a delegation of the National Institute of Diaper Services that this would make it compulsory for some diaper plants to curtail service to many homes and hospitals.

District babies using diaper services need not fear, though, for R. E. Vincent, vice president and general manager of Baby Valet, serving some 1032 babies 12 diapers each day, totaling 23,000 diapers a day to private homes and hospitals, said that they had coal heating.

He said that because of limited mileage and gas restrictions in addition to their inability to obtain the diapers or the needed cans has already curtailed their service from 43 to 45 per cent.

Writer Wins $50,000 Libel Suit

Philadelphia, Jan. 29 (AP).—A Common Pleas Court jury today awarded John O'Donnell, head of the New York Daily News Washington Bureau, the $50,000 he asked in a libel suit against the Philadelphia Record.

The suit was based on an editorial in the Philadelphia newspaper April 18, 1941, commenting on a story by O'Donnell published the day before.

O'Donnell's story, which White House Secretary Stephen Early quoted President Roosevelt as describing as "a deliberate lie," referred to impending charges in the Senate that United States naval vessels were secretly convoying British ships.

61 Today

In just as full measure as ever the felicitations of the entire country will go out to our President on his sixty-first birthday. No man has had so much responsibility to the people of the United States in this Nation's history. No man has had so much responsibility to humanity. Indeed, we are all in the same boat, sailing to a new destiny, and he is our chief helmsman. Mr. Roosevelt's shining attribute is that he has never shrunk from responsibility, even one as great as this is. He has just returned from a mission which testifies anew to that fact. May he have the wisdom to live up to his august responsibility, as well as the spirit to embrace it. The task of his leadership is to be sure and steady in his direction of our war effort, to keep our martial ardor inflamed, and to strengthen the souls of the peoples of all the United Nations. It is for such a man that the American people and their brothers in arms across the seas wish well at this milestone in his lofty career.

Mr. Maloney

Appointment of William Power Maloney to be chief of the criminal trial section of the Department of Justice is a richly deserved recognition of this prosecutor's skill and accomplishments. By such promotions the department both does itself honor and serves the public interest. But the announcement of the promotion promptly brought reports that Mr. Maloney actually was being "kicked upstairs" to appease that bloc in Congress which has been taking the part of the defendants in the Nazi network conspiracy case. Such reports give the appointment a wry look, and Attorney General Biddle has not helped to correct it by his silence. If a star halfback were made team manager the night before the big game, reports might spread that he would not be able to play. But we may be sure that the college president and the coach would vie with each other in predicting that he would be right in there carrying the ball. That is what is needed in the case of Mr. Maloney's promotion.

Mr. Maloney has investigated this case for nearly a year. Better than any man, he knows the hundreds of thousands of words of the evidence. He knows most of the defendants; he has questioned them in court and elsewhere. Even a prosecutor of comparable ability would require months to gain Mr. Maloney's mastery of this tremendous case. Mr. Maloney's predecessors at the trial chief's desk have been able to direct their staffs and at the same time to try important cases. Surely Mr. Maloney can do so, too. If not, we may be sure that Mr. Maloney would rather finish his job before being promoted than leave it to untried hands.

Complete Muddle

Earnest discussion of pay-as-you-go-tax plans has not helped to clarify the issues in dispute. In fact, the numerous proposals and counterproposals for dealing with the taxes that supposedly would be "forgiven" or "forgotten" under the Ruml plan for putting taxes on a current basis have reduced the average taxpayer to a state of complete befuddlement. Mr. Ruml's plan in general calls for a clean break with the past. He would make 1943 incomes the measure by which to gauge the amounts to be collected under current income-tax schedules. The Treasury on the other hand wants to combine this shift with schemes for increasing current tax payments by prorating taxes due on 1942 incomes over a period of years and making them payable in installments.

If one regards the payment of taxes as a debt to be defrayed out of the income of any given year, this proceeding seems logical. But if one thinks of income taxes as a current obligation which just happens to be measured with reference to last year's income, the Treasury's position seems untenable. In any case, the shift of base which was designed by Mr. Ruml as a form of tax relief for persons who had suffered reductions of income threatens to become a form of tax oppression under plans calling for payments on current income plus partial payments on incomes of the preceding year. It would be better to forget the whole thing in preference to following such a plan and be content with a reform of collection methods by deducting taxes at source. While taxation at source presents complications under any system of progressive income taxation, adjustments could be made to allow for family status and to provide reasonable exemptions. Moreover, the system could be made workable without shifting to a current tax basis.

The higher taxes go, the more serious tax evasions are going to become unless we resort to collection at the source. Delay in introducing this method of collection for regular income-tax payments is likely to cost the Treasury a good deal more than the amount of revenue lost by permitting a limited number of individuals to enjoy tax windfalls under the Ruml plan.

Mr. Hull's Ire

In the light of Mr. Hull's chronic ire, and of the lifting of the political censorship in North Africa, it is worth while to review the criticism of our political strategy in North Africa. Last week Mr. Hull seemed to have handed over the responsibility for political strategy to the War Department. Now he appears to put it at the door of President Roosevelt and Mr. Churchill. Whatever the responsibility, Mr. Hull implies that this political strategy has nothing to do with the layman, who ought to be concerned only with prosecuting the war.

The question whether this democracy has any right to interest itself in our political relations abroad requires no answer. Our democracy at least is not yet bankrupt. And what we do in our political relations abroad is, we submit, just as important to the prosecution of the war as the conduct of our military strategy. There need be no more proof of this contention than a citation of the news since the censors relaxed their grip on the correspondents in North Africa. Mr. Drew Middleton in the New York Times says that "distrust of the Americans and lack of faith in an ultimate United Nations victory are rife in French Morocco, where the political and economic situation parallels that of Algeria, intensified by the dictatorial character of Governor General Charles Nogues' regime." This must have been as painful to report as to read. It will come as a vast surprise to the American people. They had been told by their President in his address on the state of the union that we had "occupied" North Africa. Of course, this was a slip of the tongue. But at least we had landed in North Africa, lost lives in so doing, and the minimum the American people could expect is that we had landed with our war aims intact. That expectation, they now find, has not been realized. That those war aims—which, of course, are based upon the deliverance of subject peoples from the Fascist yoke of oppression—had been lost en route was known before the correspondents on the spot publicly verified the fact. The fact is now out in the open. Surely such a situation justified and still justifies criticism of our lack of political policy in North Africa in line with our war aims.

Most of the questioning did not arise right away, though there was every reason for it. Radio Morocco, even after the pacification of North Africa, still continued to emit pro-Nazi and anti-American propaganda. Frenchmen who had helped to facilitate the landings were cast into prison. The most dubious collaborationists from Vichy began to appear in North Africa, if not always at the instigation, certainly with the acquiescence, of our officialdom. Still little was said by way of criticism in the American press. There was too much appreciation of the difficulties which had to be solved. It was the lack of any evidence that there was to be a cleanup in North Africa of the collaborationist elements that provoked the questioning. Soon criticism became vocal throughout the free world. Fear even came along the underground from the silenced peoples. They saw that all manner of collaborationists with records that simply won't bear investigation were being allowed to flourish in North Africa, though they probably never read the defense of those collaborationists in America. They heard accounts of the intensified persecution of all friends of the Allied cause which succeeded the landings in North Africa.

How can we expect these silenced folk to work for us in bringing about the downfall of Hitler if we give them the impression that their present masters might be confirmed in the saddle when the Americans come? That way we shall lose our V army. That way we shall lose all hope of making Russia real copartners with us in war and peace. That way the cement binding the world's democracies everywhere as a mighty coalition of crusading warriors will simply melt away.

This is a realistic argument for asking questions about our political strategy. Why should our friends risk their skins when those skins might be just as much endangered in the day of deliverance as now? The question arises urgently as a result of what is still happening in North Africa. The President, when we embarked upon this crusade, said that we must not "compromise with evil." It would seem that we have been compromising with evil-doers from the very beginning of the intervention in North Africa. And it begins to look as if we have been compromised so deeply that our ends have been utterly forgotten. If there is any compromising to be done, we might find that when we are ready to move on our friends have already anticipated our expediency before we arrive.

Thus the argument for a change in our North African policy has become as much realistic as moral. The moral argument, however, is uppermost in the minds of the peoples of this continent. We are not thinking solely of our own people. What is being said in South America is equally uncomfortable and equally disturbing. "Repercussions of the political arrangements in North Africa are having an extremely deleterious effect on the prestige of the United States in Latin America," writes the Rio correspondent of the Baltimore Sun, "and are causing doubts both as to the war aims of the United States and her plans for the postwar world." The correspondent quotes from a number of scattered papers to attest his observation.

The assassination of Darlan gave hope that any obligations which were entered into prior to the intervention might be liquidated. This, however, is by no means the case. The obligations remain. And under cover of them we are giving the impression that we are tacitly acquiescing in what the reporter of the New York Times, fresh from a tour of French Morocco and now enabled to record his observations, calls a "political persecution that is a disgrace to the Allied nations." These are the conditions which provoked and will continue to provoke the criticisms of our North African policy. They are not answered by the slurring personalities in which the Secretary of State is by innuendo indulging, or by the spleen which seems to characterize his latter-day discussions on high policy. These do him no credit, and the war effort no service.

More To Come

During the past two years there have been many heavier raids than those carried out against Wilhelmshaven and Emden early this week. Those raids do have peculiar significance, however. For then, for the first time, the United States Army Air Force made an attack on Germany proper. The occasion, as Air Marshal Sir Arthur Harris declared in a message of congratulation to the American crews, is a "milestone on the road to victory." And, he added: "Between us we can and will bust Germany wide open."

The timing of the raids was not the least significant part of the epoch-making occasion. For the raids followed almost immediately on the heels of the news of the historic meeting between Winston Churchill and Franklin D. Roosevelt at Casablanca. That meeting the Axis press and radio has tried to explain away and laugh off. It is doubtful if they succeeded to any large extent, for the people of Germany and Italy, not to speak of the inhabitants of the satellite states, are fully aware of the potential might of the coalition which has come into being against Hitler. Whatever reasons they may have had to underestimate America's contribution to that coalition have lost much of their potency during recent months.

And now American heavy bombers manned by American fliers will bring home to the German people even more poignantly what it means to have the United States as an enemy. For the raids on Wilhelmshaven and Emden are only the beginning. The planes that dropped their loads of death and destruction on those naval bases are the harbingers of many squadrons which in the months to come will make their presence felt over an ever-widening area of the troubled Reich.

Sex Circus

A goodly number of those who sought admission to the recent sessions of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee did so, we are told, under the impression that it was the case of Mr. Errol Flynn that was being considered. Such confusions, of course, are fairly frequent in a great democracy. Generally, however, they do not involve inconvenience. But, when the recent visitors to the Hill discovered that the Flynn whose moral qualifications were being examined by the learned committeemen was just another fellow of the same name, they were disappointed and even irritated. They had wasted their time over a man who is neither very young nor very glamorous and whose alleged sins involved nothing titillating.

"Where thy treasure is, there thy heart is," says the Bible. And it is quite obvious that, war or no war, many of us still have our treasure and our hearts in Hollywood. This is why news editors, with their acute instinct, have been willing to push other news off the front pages to make room for an actor's alleged sexual adventures with a couple of young girls. The details, nasty enough in themselves, are nevertheless spiced with the familiar Hollywood properties—moonlight, palatial yacht and so on.

It is quite obvious that in the imaginative life of America today Hollywood and its aristocracy have something like the part played by the high-born shepherds and shepherdesses of Versailles or like the Sunday supplement "society" of a generation ago. Hollywood is a dream world into which, by identifying ourselves with its heroes and heroines, we ordinary folk can temporarily escape from our boredoms. This is why the mores of the Hollywood elite have so strongly influenced the national mores. It is rather sad to think that such an influence rests with such persons as the present accused who seem to have neither taste nor wit, nor discretion nor even very much common sense.

THE GOLDFINCHES

Through space that is chill and frost-filled,
Suddenly a flock of tiny birds
Swoops down . . . The branches are beguiled
With trills and tender words.

They are so gentle; their song goes
Twittering along the limbs.
They bring alive what the pear tree shows
And what the cold sky rims.

What care they for the snow's hard ply
Or the leaves stretched taut on the ground.
The tree's horn blows to the bitter sky
Medleys of gentle sound.

Trade Agreements

By Virginia Prewett

Their Double Worth

NO ISSUE that will come before the present Congress will be watched with closer interest by Latin-American observers here than action on the executive authority to negotiate trade agreements, which will come up for renewal at this session. Fifteen of the 20 other New World republics have signed agreements with us and the attention of their representatives here has already been sharply attracted by a flurry of statements made by members of the new Congress hinting that a strong opposition to this policy may arise. A survey of opinion on Capitol Hill this week indicates to this writer that the current of sentiment to make the trade agreements program a political football is subsiding, however, as the move to take lease-lend through the political hoops subsided.

To fix the place that trade agreements have in inter-American relations, it is necessary to go back to the start of this policy. When the 1934 Act was passed, the protectionist trend that we had speeded up with our Ford-McCumber Tariff Act of 1922 and carried to an extreme with the Smoot-Hawley Act of 1930 and the Revenue Act of 1932, had been taken up by all the trading nations. After the 1931 trade crash many of them had gone further than we did and open economic warfare was raging. Our own practice of economic nationalism was turned against us and our export trade had plummeted to 30 per cent of what it had been during the 1920's.

Dollar Exchange Needed

Latin America's situation at the time was extremely difficult. We had come to be by far their first source of imports. Half our direct foreign investments and nearly a fourth of our foreign portfolio investments were placed in that area. Latin-American nations, therefore, needed dollars to pay for the goods they bought from us and to pay us returns on our investments there.

American capital had about stopped moving into these countries in any volume at the time of the financial crash, so this source of dollars was stopped. Since our high-tariff policy cut down their sales here and since other nations who bought from them required them to buy back an equal amount of goods or services, Latin Americans had no way to get the dollar exchange they needed to carry on business with us as they had before. Numerous countries in the area were forced to suspend interest payments on dollar debts. They followed this with economic controls channeling trade to the nations that were offering to trade on a strictly bilateral basis.

In 1929 we had supplied Mexico, Central America, Cuba, Haiti and the Dominican Republic with 62.8 per cent of their imports. In 1933, we supplied them only 57.3 per cent. In 1929 we had supplied South America, a market three times as great as the northern tier of republics, with 31.6 per cent of their imports. In 1933, we supplied only 18.6 per cent, a tremendous loss in trade position. The total value of Latin America's purchases from us went from $2,452,318,000 in 1929 to $794,121,000 in 1933.

In 1933 the new Nazi government in Germany made the beginnings of their trade drive in Latin America, using cheap goods and promises to buy as bait. The economic stress caused by our high-tariff policy had aggravated a number of troubled political situations in the area. The Nazis were quick to seize on this in their trade campaign, which later developed into a head-on drive for political influence also.

The United States served notice to Latin America that we were ready to declare a truce in economic warfare and to work out mutually profitable trade and mutually satisfactory political relations at the Pan-American conference at Montevideo in late 1933. The Hull trade agreements plan outlined there was one of the major implementations of the Good Neighbor Policy, announced in President Roosevelt's first inaugural address. Authority to make the agreements was granted the Executive by Congress specifically to revive our shrunken foreign trade, and the success of the policy is shown by the record.

Cuba, with which the first agreement was made, will serve as example. In the first year after the first Cuban agreement went into effect, her purchases from us went up 140 per cent while her purchases from other countries went up only 100 per cent. In 1936 and 1937 Cuba's imports from us represented gains of 190 per cent and 210 per cent over 1933, while her imports from other countries went up only 90 per cent and 110 per cent, respectively. As other agreements were negotiated, similar trade increases followed.

Prewar Agreements

In the last year before war in Europe began to affect the picture, we had agreements with 10 of the 20 New World republics. In spite of heavy German competition we had climbed back to the position of supplier of 60.9 per cent of imports to the northern tier of countries and 28.7 per cent to South America.

This was almost as good a position as we had held during the boom years when loans and new capital investment were flowing southward to stimulate purchases from us.

A by-product of the trade agreements program that cannot possibly be estimated in money values is improved political relations. There has been a great change in inter-American relations since 1933 when the United States was warned that the Montevideo conference and in fact the inter-American conference system itself might collapse. Today this system has been fortified and extended and all the Latin-American republics except one are cooperating fully with us in meeting the threats of war. Improved trade relations and stabilized economic understandings brought about through the Hull reciprocal trade agreements have played a vital role in building this hemisphere front. The United States will need friends in this hemisphere to make the peace as we need them now for war, and it is only through the continuance of sound and mutually beneficial economic relations that this solidarity for the peace can be assured.

More On Casablanca

By Barnet Nover

General Giraud Says "No"

THE GROWING belief that the Casablanca conference was a military success but a political fiasco finds strong confirmation in the statement made by Gen. Henri Honore Giraud in North Africa yesterday.

Unlike Chiang Kai-shek, who, it appears, was not invited at all, and unlike Joseph Stalin, who was invited but did not attend, Generals Giraud and De Gaulle were invited and did attend the Casablanca parley.

This was the first meeting of the two French leaders since General Giraud succeeded the late Admiral Jean Darlan as high commissioner for French North and West Africa. And the meeting took place under the august aegis of none other than President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill.

WITH WHAT RESULT?

Well, General Giraud now tells us that he and General de Gaulle failed to reach any agreement on political matters; indeed that there are no present prospects for any "united French movement throughout the world." But this is hardly surprising in view of General Giraud's revelation that he never even took up "the question of politics" with the Fighting French leader.

This can only mean that the differences between the views of De Gaulle and those of Giraud were too great to be bridged. In the circumstances, there could thus be no meeting of minds, not even under the prodding of the American President and the British Prime Minister.

ABOUT the only concrete and constructive achievement that resulted from the Giraud-De Gaulle meeting was an agreement to establish "a permanent liaison on critical economic and military questions." But this is a case of the mountain laboring and giving birth to a mouse.

At this juncture the solution of any of the grave economic problems that plague North Africa depends only in a minor degree on what the authorities in North Africa do and to a major degree on what the United States does.

As for military collaboration between Giraud and De Gaulle, the presence of General Le Clerc's Fighting French forces in Libya and Tunisia provide eloquent proof that the Fighting French have not been sulking in their tents pending an agreement between their leader and General Giraud. On the contrary, throughout the period since November 7 they have continued the fight on the Axis that they have waged since the dark days of France's military collapse in 1940.

Unlike the Darlans, the Nogueses, the Peyroutons, the Bergerets and others, they did not wait to see how the military balance was swinging before jumping on the Allied bandwagon. They were on it from the beginning.

IF GENERALS GIRAUD and De Gaulle failed to reach an agreement the failure cannot be blamed on the circumstances that the Fighting French are more interested in French politics than in fighting the war. This is a monstrous distortion of the truth.

What is true is that there is a political minimum which the Fighting French demand. And Americans above all others should understand and approve. For what the Fighting French want is at least the implementation of the philosophy embodied in President Roosevelt's statement of November 17. This has not yet occurred.

In that statement President Roosevelt said:

"People in the United Nations . . . would never understand the recognition of a reconstituting of the Vichy government in France or in any French territory."

The present regime in North Africa, as dispatches from Drew Middleton of the New York Times and other reliable correspondents make clear, is for all interests and purposes a Vichy regime ruled very largely by Vichy appointees who have not yet shed their Vichy habits of mind and pattern of action.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT also said:

"I have requested the liberation of all persons in Northern Africa who had been imprisoned because they opposed the efforts of the Axis to dominate the world and I have asked for the abrogation of all laws and decrees inspired by Nazi governments or Nazi ideologists."

Mr. Middleton tells us that in Morocco at the present time there are still "three to four thousand Spanish republican prisoners in the camps, hundreds of Poles and Jews, plus those arrested for 'working against the state' which in ninety-nine out of a hundred cases means they are pro-Allied or pro-De Gaulle." Conditions in Algeria are only slightly better.

He also tells us that General Nogues' Gestapo is still engaged in shadowing those who sided with the Allies during the Vichy period in Morocco, and that "political persecution extends through the French armed forces." As late as January 8, two months after the Allied landing, he says Vice Admiral Ronach ordered all officers who are Freemasons put at the disposal of special tribunals. The Fighting French were only true to themselves and to France's traditions for refusing to reach a political agreement with General Giraud unless and until these monstrous conditions had been corrected.

The fact that, almost three months after our troops landed in Morocco and Algiers, and more than two months after President Roosevelt's statement, such conditions are still allowed to exist is eloquent proof that the political handling of the North African situation has been inept to the point of disaster.

Letters To The Editor

Communications must carry the writer's name and address, though pen names are permitted at the editor's discretion. Letters should be held to not more than 200 words. They are subject to condensation.

Ethics Must Improve

In your editorial, "Doctors Restrained," you admit, "In the public mind the question at issue was whether or not the practice of medicine is a trade," although this was not the issue before the court. And finally you conclude your otherwise admirable editorial with the desire that similar justice will some day "be meted out to every group that restrains or conspires to restrain the flow of commerce."

This hoped-for day must necessarily depend on an improved sense of ethics which itself must underlie a higher sense of justice.

Flynn Appointment

Why must the American public have to accept a shabby article just because the President happens to be under an embarrassing obligation? Was that obligation incurred in the service of our interests or in the interests of politics?

It will be very interesting indeed to see what the new Congress is going to do about this appointment, and it would be very heartening to many of us, I believe, if it were flatly and courageously turned down.

Come on, Congress, why not give us the surprise of our lives?

MARY V. T. WHITEHEAD

Mr. Murphy

I knew Mr. Murphy over many years when, first, he was our consul in Paris, France, and then rose to become counselor at the embassy. He became personally known to about every member of the American colony in France, and that means some 10,000 people or so.

It would be difficult to find a man in our foreign service more liked for his personal charm and unaffected modesty, and more respected for his really unusual ability, than Mr. Murphy.

Perhaps even a greater testimony to the man he is is the attitude toward him of the men and women who worked for and with him at our consulate and embassy in Paris, summed up in the word "square shooter."

ELBERT BALDWIN.
Washington, Jan. 15.

The Nazi spirit in North Africa, in France, and in Germany can be stamped out only through a thorough reorganization of the defeated governments, their executive, legislative and judicial branches.

In 1918 the victorious Allies achieved a revival of maybe the top tenth of the German executive, of maybe one-half of the legislative. They left the judiciary untouched. As does Mr. Murphy in North Africa today, they relied upon the occupation of a small strip of German territory for the liberation of the good German people. The reactionary spirit of Prussia was not stamped out and promptly asserted itself through terror and assassination in the very presence of the Allied occupation forces.

Today history repeats itself in North Africa.

Bixby Letter

Mr. Ernest C. Rick does not indicate in his letter in The Post regarding Chief Executive's letters of sympathy to soldiers' parents whether or not he is aware that there was no foundation in fact for the "Bixby" letter of President Lincoln. In fact, there is some question among historical writers whether "Mrs. B." ever lived.

The Once Over

Henry And Horatio

("The goal is a future when we will all be in a great middle class. But Horatio Alger is not dead and he never will be."—Henry Wallace.)

"Horatio, you are not dead,"
Our Mr. Wallace cried;
"An Alger there will always be,
With prospects high and wide."
"Oh, thank you for such kindly words,"
Exclaimed Horatio;
"I feel so put upon today
I really wouldn't know."

II

"No matter what you think yourself, You're in the pink, my lad,"
Then Mr. Wallace said, with all
The gusto that he had;
"And what is more, you'll never die.
When you feel gone to pot,
Just take my little word for it
And know that you have not!"

III

"It's nice of you to say as much,"
Said Alger, quite a wreck,
"But 'twould be more convincing if
Your feet were off my neck!
I'm grateful for your gentle words—
They lift my spirits high—
Or would if you would stop to take
Your thumb out of my eye."

IV

"All people are to be as one,
In one great middle class,
But you will always be the same
Old Alger none can pass.
We plan to change 'most everything,"
Hank Wallace pointed out,
"But Alger's style will not be cramped—
Of that there is no doubt."

V

"How sweet of you to speak this way,"
Said Alger as he fought
To crawl from under all the bricks
Beneath which he'd been caught.
"Your verdict greatly pleases me,"
He said (all black and blue,
And nursed his many bruises from
So many programs new).

VI

"Oh, Alger, drive your fears away," Then Mr. Wallace said,
"For even with no place to go,
We'll help you get ahead.
Our way of life will scrambled be;
All customs old will go,
But Algers there will always be . . .
Or very nearly so!"

VII

"You've made me very happy, Hen,"
Horatio then said.
(And tried to get his irons off
And mend his broken head).
"Your verdict means a lot to me—
Now forward I shall rip . . .
PROVIDED THAT AN AMBULANCE IS READY FOR THE TRIP!"

Estimate Of Freud

An errant correspondent from the martial hinterlands of Quantico, Va., berates your recent editorial estimate of Sigmund Freud as a gloomy prophet of the native sadism in all human beings.

Now it is in no sense to detract from the merit of the late Viennese psychologist's brilliant achievements to call timely attention, as your editorial does, to this regrettable facet of his thought. Nor is it true, as Mr. Hollod asserts, that Freud ever championed the view that the cultural setup provokes those terrible aberrations in man which periodically explode in mass licentiousness, hatred and war. The origin of this phenomena is pivoted, according to Freud, upon the chemistry of man's sexual needs. The driving force is the libido, intolerably repressed not by Mr. Hollod's "irrational institutions," but by the necessary morality of civilization.

Psychologists, together with those amphibians of the clinical world, the psychiatrists, who have achieved distinction in the application of Freud's labyrinthine method, concede his failure to appreciate the decisive influence exercised by cultural patterns in determining the incidence of mental health and disease. So gifted a scholar as Harry Stack Sullivan anticipated your editorial suggestion that it is perhaps time to begin thinking of something else besides Freudian psychoanalysis if we are to cope successfully with the maladjusted mind. It is Dr. Sullivan's conviction that any mental therapy that does not "envisage a changed social order" is condemned to impotence. And this is something to which Freud paid scant attention.

It has been observed that the Freudian technique is far closer to a cult than the theories of a science. Like all cults it has, to Freud's misfortune, attracted a lot of indiscriminate adulation, the type of adulation which, in Burke's phrase, "venerates where it is not able presently to comprehend."

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Occam's Razor

IN DISCUSSING the meaning of the Casablanca meeting it is best to follow the rule of common sense laid down long ago by William of Occam, one of the great doctors of the church. The rule, which is known as Occam's Razor, is that in explaining a situation one should not use the theories which are unnecessarily complicated. The rule would apply, for example, in answering the question why Soviet Russia and China did not participate. It would apply in noting that the President specifically suggested that the meeting be known as the "unconditional surrender" conference. And it is an excellent rule for not getting too muddled about the political muddle in North Africa.

LIPPMANN

THUS when the official communique says that Stalin was cordially invited but that he was too busy with his great offensive to leave Russia, that really is a perfectly good explanation. Stalin is conducting what might prove to be the decisive battle of the war: is there anything in the least bit strange that he did not feel able to make a long and hazardous airplane journey to attend a conference? And if the question is why he did not send Mr. Molotov or someone else to represent him, the fact that Russia for the best of reasons is not at war with Japan is a sound enough reason why Russia did not participate in a conference which had to take decisions for fighting Japan.

If Russia could not attend, does it not follow that China could not be asked to share decisions which affect the European war in which China is not an active belligerent and Russia is the main belligerent? To use more complicated theories to explain these matters is to run the risk of raising issues which probably do not exist.

BY THE same kind of reasoning it seems most likely that the President would not have asked to have the conference known as the "unconditional surrender" conference if these words did not imply that far-reaching political decisions have been taken which are in accord with the views of Stalin and Chiang Kai-shek. The other war ended in an armistice, which though dictated as to its military terms, was based on a political contract made with the enemy when the Kaiser had been dismissed. The decision to do differently this time, not to negotiate the conclusion of hostilities, and not to make a deal with the immediate successors of Hitler and Mussolini, is one of the great decisions of the war.

An entirely unsubstantiated and probably entirely unfounded rumor current in Washington this last week will illustrate the importance of the "unconditional surrender" decision. The rumor, though no credence can be put in it, is the kind of rumor which could be true, or could some time later become true. One form of the rumor is that Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Churchill received a German peace feeler from Doctor Schacht. Now Doctor Schacht is one of those European figures we have already encountered among the French: he has managed to be pro-Nazi with Hitler and anti-Nazi with Hitler's enemies. Unconditional surrender would mean that we were not going to entangle ourselves, and compromise our victory, by getting ourselves committed to support a Schacht government, and then be told that we have to take Shacht to our bosoms because we can not find any honest competent Germans, that Dr. Schacht is not keeping in a concentration camp, to administer Germany.

OCCAM'S RAZOR is rather a good rule for thinking about French politics in North Africa. For example, we are told that Frenchmen, even those who want to oust the Nazis, are divided among themselves about their leaders and about how France is to participate in the war. Then we are told that because the French are not united and unanimous, the Americans and British who have armies in Africa, must in their policy reflect this confusion. But surely it must be the fact that the more confused we are, the more the French will remain confused, and that the sooner we pull ourselves together and act with decision and directness, the sooner we shall give the French a lead which will unite them. The idea that an occupying army has to deal with a war zone on the basis of imaginary Gallup polls is fantastic. The right way to administer a war zone is through reliable men backed by force, and the policy of backing your real friends relentlessly is the only known way of uniting your hesitant friends.

Nothing is so certain to produce disunity, intrigue, subversive maneuvers, factionalism and politics as a policy which makes you look too weak and too confused to know what you want and to insist upon having it. In dealing with a great heterogeneous, ancient colonial region like Africa, weakness and irresolution are cardinal sins. The remedy for intrigue, confusion, and disloyalty is not to out-intrigue the intriguers but for strong men to dominate the situation by the prestige which comes from the exercise of power and the adherence to principle. This is the lesson of experience, though it may sound Olympian to some, the lesson taught by the experience of distinguished men who have dealt with problems of this sort—of men like Lyautey and Milner, Elihu Root and Stimson.

WOULD THAT we had had such a man to direct the political preparations in North Africa, and to be the master of the situation on the spot out there now. There would have been from the first something solid and clear in the midst of the muddle and flux, something direct and firm in the midst of the corruption and demoralization. And it might not have been necessary to pretend that the muddle which was an accomplished fact when the President and the Prime Minister got to Africa is, therefore, no muddle because they could not instantly clear it up.

On A Day At The Front

Witness' Account

By Harold V. Boyle
Associated Press Staff Writer

With the American Army on the Tunisian Front, Jan. 25—(Delayed). This is one frontline observer's story of how the Americans broke the backbone of the German's drive down the Ousseltia Valley.

In day-long action in which American tanks, artillery and infantry worked in perfect unison, the Nazis were slapped back several miles to the head of the valley and the Americans seized heights dominating the road to Kairouan.

I rode to the battle area in a jeep with Capt. William Byrne, 25, of Garden City, N. Y., who got a bullet through a leg in the Oran landing. We arrived near the command post at 9:45 a. m. Following is my log for the remainder of the day.

9:45 a. m.—We are pushing forward with our infantry through pine scrub country resembling the Rocky Mountains on a small scale. Firing ahead indicates we are in contact with the enemy. We meet a mine-laying group which includes Sergt. Billy Wesson, 22, Alvarado, Tex., Pvt. Jake Weber, 25, Reading, Pa., and Pvt. Donald Perkins of Bellmore, Long Island, N. Y.

Off to War in a Jeep

10:45 a. m.—We're in luck. Just met a colonel who piled us into his jeep. This is the way to go to battle.

11 a. m.—Our ride is halted by boulders. It's uphill on foot now. Machine gun bullets are beginning to whine around us.

11:45 a. m.—Our 105-millimeter artillery shells have made Jerry put his tail between his legs and take cover. More machine gun bullets, and we take shelter in a gully, where we meet Lieut. Carl Riede, 24, of Burlington, Vt.; Sergt. Carol Sanicki, 22, South Deerfield, Mass., and Corpl. Victor Lister, 22, Augusta, Me.

12:45 p. m.—We reach the forward command post of Lieut. Col. Clarence Beck of Daytona Beach, Fla. He is directing an attack on the last hill between us and the Kairouan Road. Talked with Lieut. Lloyd D. McGill, 22, of Concord, Tenn., whose uniform is stained with the blood of a wounded buddy he has been assisting. Lieut. Robert Keith of Portland, Me., has a narrow escape when a mortar shell bursts near him.

"Mission Accomplished"

1 p. m.—Our artillery just crowned the German command point across the Kairouan Road. The order came: "Cease fire, mission accomplished." Also at this post is infantry Capt. George Juskalin, 28, of Fitchburg, Mass., and Capt. Bill Farrell, 26, of Wilmington, Del.

2:15 p. m.—Our artillery is beating a tatoo on Tefifila Hill. Between bursts I can see Jerry crawl out for another go with his machine guns. There are fewer German 88s now. We just knocked out two of their guns.

3:15 p. m.—Back to our battalion command post for lunch of crackers and chocolate.

4 p. m.—The attack now has been launched against the last two German-held hills at the pass leading to Kairouan. The entire front is one mass of flame. Jerry isn't taking this lying down.

5 p. m.—Rain is falling. Our artillery is laying down a beautiful smoke screen for the advancing infantrymen. "We'll have to dig them out," an officer says. "They are too well dug in to be flushed out with artillery."

5:30 p. m.—Getting dark and I have to hitch-hike to headquarters to get to a typewriter. The last thing I see is our infantry edging forward through sleet and smoke in the direction of the enemy positions. On the way back a soldier stops us just in time as our engineers touch off three mines left in the road by the retreating Germans.

6:30 p. m.—At headquarters I learn that our tanks in unopposed reconnaissance up the valley during the day found piles of equipment abandoned by the Germans.

7 p. m.—At the mess tent I had a meal of soup, stew and tea, and soon to bed. That is what a newsman's day is like at this front.

Your Federal Income Tax

No. 19. Dividend Income

Among the forms of income received by many taxpayers is that of dividends. Because of the wide distribution of investment securities, many persons have income of this character, even though often small in amount. Such income must be reported for Federal income tax purposes to the extent that it represents taxable income.

Income from dividends is entered on line 2 of the return Form 1040. Dividends in general represent distributions of earnings and profits by a corporation or association to its shareholders, and constitute taxable income. In certain cases, however, such as the liquidation of a bank or other corporation, dividends may represent a distribution of the shareholders' original investment, and to that extent would not constitute income, but a return of original capital, and accordingly would not be taxable.

In certain cases, also, such as that of mining companies declaring dividends out of depletion reserves, the dividend may represent wholly or partially a return of investment. Persons receiving dividends of this character are usually advised by the corporation as to the amount which it considers to be nontaxable as a return of capital. It is appropriate for the taxpayer to enter in his return the amounts received in accordance with the advice by the corporation, but it should be borne in mind that the determination of the taxable amount may be subject to revision as a result of official audit of the corporation's return.

Dividends on share accounts in Federal savings and loan associations on shares issued prior to March 28, 1942, are exempt from normal tax, but must be included in surtax net income for surtax purposes. Dividends on share accounts with respect to shares issued on or after March 28, 1942, are subject to both normal tax and surtax.

For taxpayers on a cash basis, that is, reporting income as received, and expenses as paid, dividend income is reported as received. Dividend income is considered as received when the dividend check is received, irrespective of when the taxpayer may cash the check.

No. 20. Interest Income

Interest income is entered in the return Form 1040 as items 3 to 5. Interest is variously taxable, some interest being wholly tax-exempt and some partly tax-exempt. Wholly tax-exempt interest includes interest on (a) obligations of a State, Territory, or political subdivision thereof, or of the District of Columbia, or United States possessions; (b) obligations issued prior to March 1, 1941, under the Federal Farm Loan Act, or amendments to the Act; (c) obligations of the United States issued on or before September 1, 1917; and (d) Treasury notes, Treasury bills, and Treasury certificates of indebtedness issued prior to March 1, 1941. Although such interest is tax-exempt, the amount of such obligations held by the taxpayer, as well as the amount of interest received or accrued during the year, must be shown in the return (in Schedule A).

Certain other interest is partially tax-exempt. Interest on United States Savings bonds and Treasury bonds issued prior to March 1, 1941, is of this class. Interest on such bonds is exempt from normal tax, and on holdings of such bonds up to $5000 principal amount is exempt from surtax also; that is, interest on such bonds held in excess of $5000 principal amount must be included in surtax net income for computation of surtax.

Interest on obligations issued on or after March 1, 1941, by the United States or any agency or instrumentality of the United States, is subject to both normal tax and surtax. However, in the case of obligations issued at a discount, for example, war savings bonds, where income is reported on the cash basis, the interest may be reported each year as accrued (shown in a table on the bonds as the increase in the redemption value) or it may be deferred until the bonds come due, when it may all be included as income in that year. (Once a taxpayer has elected to accrue the discount, he can not change to the other method.)

On certain bonds with a "tax-free covenant" the corporation issuing the bonds pays part of the income tax on such bond interest (2 per cent of the total interest earned by the bond). A person receiving interest on such bonds is entitled to a credit of the amount of income tax paid by the corporation in computing his tax due. The amount of such credit for tax paid at the source is entered in item 31 of the return Form 1040.

Interest on coupon bonds is considered received when the coupon becomes due and payable, irrespective of when the taxpayer cashes or presents the coupon for payment (unless, of course, the issuer of the bonds is in default and no funds are available to meet the interest). Interest on savings and deposit accounts is considered as received when it has been credited to the account of the taxpayer, subject to his withdrawal, irrespective of whether he withdraws it or not. Other interest is considered as received when paid or made available to the holder of the obligation.

Sometimes, notes are sold at a discount and redeemed at the face amount. While such discount is frequently considered interest in the commercial sense, for tax purposes it represents a gain from sale or exchange of property and is not reported as interest, but as a gain under item 8.

Salary Limit Fought in House Unit

By the Associated Press

A concerted drive to tack on a rider repealing President Roosevelt's $25,000 (after taxes) salary limitation stymied action by the House Ways and Means Committee yesterday on a bill to increase the Nation's statutory debt limit from 125 billions to 210 billions.

Representative Gearhart (Republican) of California offered the repealer, and the members forthwith decided to postpone action on the debt question until February 6.

Meantime, the Senate Finance Committee voted unanimously to report a bill raising the debt ceiling, with no amendments.

Gearhart, recalling that the House committee last year voted down a proposition to limit salaries to $25,000, said "the intent of Congress was treated with indifference" when the President issued an executive order imposing the limitation after the anti-inflation law was enacted last October.

"We must repeal this," he declared, referring to the regulation. "Otherwise we will admit the executive department will act as a court of appeals over the Congress of the United States, with power to reverse its actions."

Representative Disney (Democrat), Oklahoma, described the maneuver as "a revolt against Government by directive."

Gearhart expressed confidence proponents of the salary limit repealers had enough votes in the 25-member committee to make it a part of the debt limitation bill.

The Gallup Poll

Hitler Greatly Overrated as Propaganda Genius, Surveys of American Opinion Show

By George Gallup
Director American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Jan. 29.—Hitler will probably go down in history as one of the world's worst public relations experts.

It will be just ten years tomorrow since he first took over the reins in Germany. The German Reich was at that time "a feeble young republic," as one writer recently put it, but she had a great many friends in this country.

Even as late as 1937, unbelievable as it may seem in retrospect, Germany was voted the third best-liked country in Europe in a poll throughout the United States. This popularity was to be short-lived.

Hitler's minority oppression tactics did him no good in liberty-loving American eyes. The ruthless treatment of Jews and Catholics was strongly condemned by the public from the start. As early as 1936, 43 per cent of voters polled by the Institute felt that we should boycott the Olympic Games in Germany because of Hitler's treatment of minorities.

The Nazi invasion of Austria marked the turning point in America's attitude. From that moment the public took to disliking Hitler's hand wherever it showed. However much Hitler may have bluffed others, he never really succeeded in fooling the American people. They did not want to start a war—people in democracies never do—but it is significant that from 1938 on, the majority of American voters expressed the realistic belief that if war broke out in Europe, the United States would get into it before it was over. Nobody believed Hitler's promises.

"We've got to have a strong fighting force . . . You can't trust Hitler . . . Treaties don't mean a thing to Hitler . . . He's out to grab off whatever he can" —these became typical comments voiced by the public in Institute surveys as early as 1938.

While isolationist sentiment continued to be a strong factor and undoubtedly forced the Government to move slowly, in the end the scales of national opinion tipped more and more toward aid to Britain.

On the eve of lease-lend in 1941, the majority of voters were saying that the United States should increase its aid to the British. After two months debate in Congress on the lease-lend act, the public favored its passage by a vote of 2 to 1.

One of Hitler's motives in attacking Russia, it is said, was the hope that by appearing to conduct a crusade against Bolshevism, he might win sympathy abroad and divide sentiment among his democratic enemies. If that were indeed one of his motives, he failed. Polls in the United States after the outbreak of the Nazi-Russian war found that only 4 per cent wanted to see Germany beat Russia.

De Gaulle Lauds Roosevelt as Great Statesman

London, Jan. 29 (AP).—Maj. Claude de Boislambert, Fighting French officer who attended the Casablanca conference, said today that President Roosevelt's "kindness and open-hearted reception" of Gen. Charles de Gaulle overwhelmed the general. The major said that the President, speaking flawless French, exclaimed:

"Ah, and this is General de Gaulle. I recognize you from your photographs."

After the meeting, he said, De Gaulle described the President as a "really very great man of state who sees things from an extremely lofty point of view."

House Group Approves Telegraph Merger

The House Interstate Commerce Committee approved legislation yesterday permitting merger of the Western Union and Postal Telegraph Companies.

The Senate passed a similar measure Monday. The Senate's version would give preferential employment status to present employes of both companies for five years after the merger. The House bill would reduce this to four years.

Dietz Gets 7 Months

New York, Jan. 29 (AP).—Jack Dietz, 41, a Hollywood picture producer, was sentenced today to seven months' imprisonment and fined $5000 on his plea of guilty to a charge of income tax evasion. The indictment charged evasion of $200,237 in taxes for 1936 and 1937.

A Santa Fe Train 18,080 Miles Long —and still growing!

Since Pearl Harbor, Santa Fe has moved over 1,956,207 freight carloads of military material and essential civilian goods in this war.

That's equivalent to a freight train 18,080 miles long—long enough to reach all the way from Chicago to the Solomon Islands via the Mediterranean. And this train is growing longer by the hour!

This is only one of many new mass transportation records American railroads are making in handling essential materials these days—and much of the credit for this goes to our civilian shippers. . .

For the shippers are cooperating 100% with the railroads, the War Department, and the Office of Defense Transportation—by ordering freight cars only for their actual requirement, loading them to capacity, and unloading and releasing them promptly.

Nats Trade Bill Zuber to Yanks for Priddy

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

That $318.60 mutuel paid by the three-year-old Colonial Miss at New Orleans the other day was a handsome return on a $2 turf investment but really it was small potatoes compared to some of the more luscious payoffs in racing.

POVICH

Whenever astronomical mutuel pay-offs are the topic, the coup de grace can always be delivered with mention of a nag named Wishing Ring, which was the prince of good things on an afternoon in June, 1912, at Latonia. There, chums, was something to transport the moon shooters into umpteenth heaven. When Wishing Ring cantered down in front of that Latonia field he set a mutuel record that still stands. A $2 ticket fetched its owner $1885.50. That was 941 to 1, my hearties.

The little Hagerstown (Md.) track served up a mutuel in May, 1934, that stands as tops in Maryland. An oat-burner named Trycook circled the half-mile Hagerstown oval in front of everything else in the race, and it was at odds of 408 to 1. Two-dollar-ticket holders collected $810 per copy. Five years before something called Heather Moon stepped down at Hagerstown at a $499.20 mutuel.

The best mutuel pay-off on a major Maryland track has been standing as a record for 30 years, now. Pimlico was the scene, in May, 1913. The horse was a long-since forgotten steed called Cadeau. He got home in front at $577.20 for each $2 ticket.

Charles Town is no stranger to the fancy mutuel figures, either. Something called Zombro got home one afternoon at the West Virginia track at a $520 mutuel, paid to the only guy with the foresight, or courage, to have a bet on him.

But Charles Town missed out on its big chance to top all pay-off records. That's a story that deserves some kind of a niche all its own in any discussion of this kind. Charles Town was the setting on the day when a 2000-to-one shot got home, but nobody had the necessary credentials to line up at the pay-off window to collect.

Charles Town's was the case of a $4000 mutuel crying to be collected but nobody was there with a ticket on the winner. The horse was a nag called Sweep Vestal, whose own stable didn't have faith enough to risk as much as a deuce on her. More than $4000 was bet on other horses in the race's win pool. When Sweep Vestal stepped down with nobody holding a win ticket on her, all of the win money went begging until the track officials generously decided to split the win pool among holders of win tickets on the horse that finished second. That was probably the sorriest day in the life of every moonshooter in the land.

It couldn't happen, of course, on a major Maryland track. The folks at the tracks prepare for just such an eventuality as no tickets being sold on a horse in a race. They permit no horse to go to the post without a bet, even if they have to buy a $2 ticket with the track's money, just to establish the horse's odds.

Strictly speaking, the world's record pay-off happened in England one afternoon in 1929, when a horse named Coole got home in front in hurdle race at Haydack Park, England. That one was a 3400-to-one shot, and the wife of a Liverpool physician had a 2-shilling (50-cent) wager on him, collecting $1705 for her her half buck. Earlier the same year, a horse named Robelo had won a race at Shanghai, China, and they paid off at 3037 to one, dollars, not yen.

For a horse that didn't win the race, a steed named Baal did all right for his backers at Hialeah Park on February 4, 1932. Beal finished second, and returned a place mutuel of $971.10, which stands as the record place pay-off of all time. As in the case of most of such fancy mutuels, Baal's stable didn't have a copper on him, straight place or show.

If you have no confidence, incidentally, in your ability to pick a long shot to win, there's a handy alternative. Any bookmaker will take your bet on a horse to finish last in a 10-horse race and lay you 8-to-1 that the horse you name won't finish last.

Internal Revenue to Receive Players' Salaries, Not Names

Baseball 'Ceiling Club' So Secret Stars Will Not Know Each Other

By Judson Bailey

Associated Press Sports Writer

New York, Jan. 29.—Governmental salary restrictions are going to give baseball an informal secret society this year known as the "Ceiling Club" and composed of the highest-paid players from each of the 16 major league teams.

In theory, at least, the personnel of the "Ceiling Club" will be so mysterious that most of the members won't know each other. To establish a ceiling for 1943 contracts the two leagues will file with the Bureau of Internal Revenue a schedule showing the top sum paid a player last year, but names will not be given.

This means that two lists will be turned in reading something like this:

AMERICAN LEAGUE

Yankees	$42,000
Red Sox	30,000
Nationals	20,000
Indians	15,000
Athletics	15,000
White Sox	15,000
Tigers	12,000
Browns	12,000

NATIONAL LEAGUE

Giants	$25,000
Dodgers	25,000
Reds	16,000
Cardinals	15,000
Braves	15,000
Cubs	15,000
Pirates	14,000
Phillies	10,000

But in order to help the "ceiling club" get organized it is possible to figure out a matching list of names for these estimated salaries. This would shape up about like this:

AMERICAN LEAGUE

Yankees	Joe Dimaggio
Red Sox	Ted Williams
Nationals	Buck Newsom
Indians	Lou Boudreau
Athletics	Bob Johnson
White Sox	T. Lee, L. Appling
Tigers	Rudy York
Browns	Elden Auker

NATIONAL LEAGUE

Giants	Mel Ott
Dodgers	Leo Durocher
Reds	Bucky Walters
Cardinals	Lon Warneke
Braves	Eddie Miller
Cubs	S. Hack, C. Passeau, B. Lee
Pirates	E. Fletcher, A. Lopez
Phils	Nick Etten

Although they have not yet seen the Internal Revenue Bureau's order, most baseball people believe salaries paid playing managers would figure in the ceiling schedule, but the salaries paid bench managers would not.

The leagues also will report the lowest salaries paid players in order to establish a minimum for the salary schedule. The players concerned by this, however, are the unheralded youngsters major league clubs farm out to the minors and there is a wide variance in the sums and the forms of contracts they are given.

An estimated minimum salary for a player spending an entire season in the major leagues is $3500.

Injuries Inspire Don Hutson's Retirement

Star Packer Flankman Hopes Pro Grid Fans Will Understand

By Dave Hoff

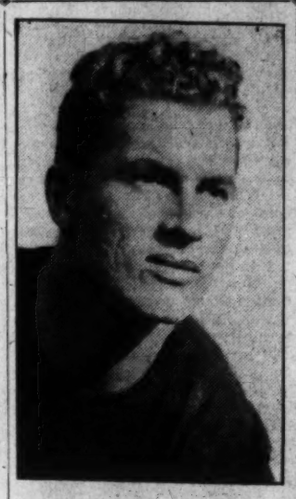
Associated Press Sports Writer

Chicago, Jan. 29.—Don Hutson, the artful end whose name is etched 17 times in the National Football League's record book, hopes the fans will understand why he plans to retire from pro football despite the fact that family men are needed by the Green Bay Packers and the rest of the league more than ever before.

Severe chest injuries, suffered two seasons ago and aggravated further last fall, inspired Hutson's retirement announcement yesterday, even though he knows the Packers already have lost 26 players to the armed forces since 1940. The National League as a whole has sent 317 players direct from clubs into the services and faces a serious shortage of material for 1943.

Thirty years old, Hutson has been playing football for 14 years, the last eight with the Packers. He's already lasted beyond the normal span of effective competion in the pro league and yet shows no signs of slowing up. He has just been named the circuit's most valuable player for the second straight year.

"Some fellows make a ceremony of announcing their retirement every year," Hutson said. "I meant it last year but then decided to try one more season. This time I intend to make it stick."



Don, a product of the University of Alabama, was hurt January 4, 1942, in the pro-bowl game while playing with the league All-Stars against the Chicago Bears in New York's Polo Grounds. He suffered two cracked ribs when he was tackled after snaring a pass.

Last November 22 against the Giants in the Polo Grounds he was hurt again, one rib being torn loose an inch from his breast bone. Against Philadelphia the next Sunday he played only long enough to catch two passes, one for a touchdown that beat the Eagles 7-0. The following week he performed long enough to take only one pass but was able to kick three conversion points and a field goal good enough to edge out the Pittsburgh Steelers 24-21.

Opposing teams didn't make it any easier for Hutson, either, putting two and sometimes three men on him on pass defense and sending out two men to slow him when he was going down on punts. Never a robust player, Hutson wore very little padding—to facilitate his pass catching—and all these things contributed to the general bruising he took in league play.

Hutson believes he never would have been a success in pro football except at Green Bay under Coach Curley Lambeau. The Packer system of pass-offense and the Lambeau plan which allowed Hutson to escape the usual duties of a defensive end he'ped him remain effective at an age most players would have retired to the grandstand.

Pep Decisions Stolz; Records 59th Straight

By the Associated Press

New York, Jan. 29.—The longest winning streak in modern ring history was run up to 59 straight victories tonight as Willie Pep, a wild-punching little tiger from Connecticut, smashed out a one-sided 10-round decision over Allie Stolz in Madison Square Garden. Pep weighed 127¾; Stolz, 133½.

Before the largest crowd to see a fight in the garden this year—and one of the largest turnouts in the last three years—the New York Commission's featherweight champion from Hartford not only continued along the unbeaten trial in his two and one-half year professional career, but actually won going away from one of the world's ranking lightweights.

Pep floored the Jerseyan once, for a two-count in the second round with a sizzling left hook, and opened a small cut alongside Allie's left eye in the eighth session, as he upset the betting boys who had installed the curly-haired Newark stylist a 5-to-6 favorite just before ring-time.

Except for the third and fourth heats, when Stolz' body punching slowed him down temporarily, and the eighth, when Allie cut Willie's left eye and staggered him momentarily, the New Englander was out in front all the way.

The Associated Press score card gave Pep eight rounds and Stolz 2. One of Willie's heats, the third, was given to him by Referee Billy Cavanagh when Stolz was guilty of low punching.

Daddio, Star Cardinal End, Becomes Ensign

Pittsburgh, Jan. 29 (AP).—Bill Daddio, star end of the Chicago Cardinals of the National Pro Football League, has been commissioned an ensign in the Navy and will report for duty Tuesday. He is a former Pitt All-America gridder.

Jimmy Foxx Is Being Sued For Divorce

By the Associated Press

Norristown, Pa., Jan. 29.—James E. (Jimmy) Foxx, one of the greatest first basemen in baseball annals, was sued for divorce today by Helen Helte Foxx whom he married secretly in 1928. She charged cruelty.

FOXX

The 35-year-old baseball hero whose home run smashes paced the Philadelphia Athletics to world championships in 1929 and 1930, is the father of two sons, aged 13 and 6. The family made their home at Jenkintown, Pa.

Foxx was sold by the Athletics to the Boston Red Sox in 1935, where he remained until last year when he joined the Chicago Cubs via the waiver route.

A member of six All-star American League teams, he led the league in batting in 1933 and 1938 and was voted the most valuable player in 1932, 1933, and 1938.

Navy Junior Five Wins Opener, 45-25

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 29 (AP).—Navy's junior varsity cagers, in their first game of the winter season, decisively downed the Baltimore Y. M. C. A. team, 45 to 25, today.

In the early stages of the game the score was tied, 4-4, but Navy gained and then maintained a substantial lead over the visitors for the remainder of the contest.

Navy's Sam Gorsline led the scoring with 14 points, while Stass and Norfolk shared the honors with five points each for the Baltimore team.

Shaughnessy Ponders Pitt Coaching Aides

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, Jan. 29.—Clark D. Shaughnessy, new football coach at the University of Pittsburgh, talked over the matter of assistant coaches with director of athletics, James Hagan, today preparatory to assuming his new duties with the Panthers.

Hagan said the 50-year-old "T" formation strategist would have "full rein in naming his coaching aides."

Shaughnessy declined to name the men being considered as assistant coaches but said he hoped to announce them within a few days.

Shaughnessy, who built a Rose Bowl championship team at Stanford and won seven out of nine games with a none-too-promising Maryland eleven last year, expressed himself as "eager to tackle the new job." He said he would like to begin spring grid practice just as soon as the right kind of weather is available.

He made no comment on the future of football during the war other than "I think we should have football and continue it as long as we can."

Shaughnessy's resignation at Maryland, announced Monday, becomes effective February 1. He succeeds Charley Bowser at Pitt.

WarmerdamEnters Millrose Carnival

New York, Jan. 29 (INS).—Cornelius Warmerdam of San Francisco, the world's only 15-foot pole vaulter, will compete in the Millrose Games February 6, officials announced tonight.

Warmerdam withheld his entry until he was certain of travel accommodations from the coast.

In recent training Warmerdam vaulted 14 feet 9 inches, best he has ever done in practice. His indoor record is 15 feet 7¼ inches and outdoors he has soared over the bar at 15 feet 7¾ inches.

Tech Beaten By Eastern In Overtime

Tide Scores, 34-32, In Second Extra Period as Seaton Tallies Field Goal

After tossing the game out the window twice, Eastern High's league-leading and unbeaten basketers got around to stopping a favored Tech club in the second overtime period yesterday, 34-32, as the interhigh basketball series was continued with two scorching exhibitions at Roosevelt Gym.

The first clash went to Woodrow Wilson, 27-25, as it came from behind and nipped a strong Coolidge rally at the end.

Thus Eastern remained in an undefeated class by itself in the standings. Tech dropped into a four-way tie for third place with Wilson, Central and Coolidge, a full game behind the runner-up Roosevelt forces. Tonight action moves back to Tech Gym, where Roosevelt faces a winless Anacostia quint and an equally winless Western five goes against Central.

It was Freddy Seaton, left-handed forward of the young Eastern forces, who gave breathless fans a chance to breathe again in the feature. A minute and 10 seconds of the "sudden death" period had elapsed when Seaton took a bounce pass from Tommy Wingo, dribbled once and dropped the ball softly through the hoop. The gym was a madhouse after that as fans let off steam which had stored up from the opening gun.

Never more than 4 points separated the teams as the lead changed hands six times in the first three periods. With two minutes left, Eastern was out front, 28-25, but it couldn't hold it. Jim Kranking sliced 1 point off that and then, with 20 seconds remaining, Keith Harder pivoted and slammed in a perfect one-hander to cause the first overtime.

Thirty seconds after its start Eastern was leading, 32-28, on Billy Deck's fast snowbird and Seaton's running side shot. But again Tech came back, Harder accounting for three of the necessary points, boosting his total to 16 for the game. Seaton's critical shot later gave him his ninth and tenth points, tying with Cookie Dellinger for Eastern honors.

Rough was hardly the word for the first engagement. In all 31 fouls were called, Wilson making good on 7 out of 17 tosses and Coolidge on 7 out of 16. The winners lost Billy Jawish, Stu Brown and Windy Van Deusen on personals, and Coolidge was deprived of Billy Penn.

Finaly it was Bill Tanney's set shot which settled things. It gave Wilson a 27-21 edge with 1½ minutes left, barely voiding the comeback baskets of Charley Greenbaum and George Bartlett. Shortly after the start of the last quarter, the losers were ahead by 21-17.

Candini Also Acquired in Player Swap

Griff Gives Hurler, Cash to New York Club for Infielder, Newark Pitcher

By Shirley Povich

Post Staff Writer

A two-year effort by the Nats to acquire Infielder Gerry Priddy of the Yankees ended on a success note yesterday when the clubs transacted a three-player deal.

Priddy was obtained by the Nats in a trade that also brought the Washington Club Pitcher Milo Candini of the Yankee-owned Newark club in exchange for Pitcher Bill Zuber and an undisclosed sum of cash described as "a lot" by Clark Griffith.

Griffith denied the Priddy deal was related to last summer's trade that sent Outfielder Roy Cullenbine to the Yankees, although at the time it was reported the Yankees would later deliver Priddy to the Nats. Zuber's transfer to the Yankees was also hinted at that time.

'Deal Just Materialized'

"This deal just materialized," said Griffith, "although we have been trying to get Priddy for a couple of years. We had to pay a lot of money to make the trade."

Considerably elated, Griffith issued a statement to newsmen yesterday in which he said "We believe Priddy will be a most valuable asset to the Washington club and his addition as a third baseman makes Manager Ossie Bluege and myself believe that we will have a first-division team."

Griffith admitted sadly, however, the Washington club is gambling on the draft status of the 22-year-old Priddy, who, though married, is childless. The other figures in the deal, Zuber and Candini, have wives and children.

Priddy was never able to earn a regular job for himself in the Yankee infield despite trials at second base, his native position, and at first and third base. The Nats value his versatility highly, however, and intend to start the season with the blond fellow playing third.

In 1940, Priddy achieved fame with the Yankees' Kansas City farm team as a member of the Priddy-Rizzuto double-play combination. He was a heftier hitter than Rizzuto in the minors, but in contrast with Rizzuto's immediate success with the Yankees after the pair were brought up in 1941.

Priddy played 35 games at third base for the Yankees last year, eleven games at first base, eight at second and three at shortstop. He batted .280. He was the Yankees' first baseman in the last three games of the World Series after Buddy Hassett was injured.

Batting Average Dropped

He is a right-handed hitter, whose batting average dropped sharply after he reached the majors.

The Nats were first impressed with Candini, a right-hander, when he shut them out two years ago in Florida in an exhibition game. He was then with Kansas City. Last year, at Newark, he won seven games and lost nine. Candini is short in stature, and throws a curve ball, chiefly. He is 25 years old.

Zuber was a member of the Nats for two seasons, after being purchased from the Cleveland Indians. His work with the Nats was distinguished chiefly by its inconsistency. He was alternately brilliant and ineffective, working chiefly in relief roles.

Zuber won nine games and lost nine with the seventh-place Nats last season, which is an item in his favor. The tall, 28-year-old right-hander was paid a tribute by Ted Williams last summer when the Red Sox slugger declared "Zuber's fast ball always looked as quick to me as Feller's."

Arkansas Senate Asked to Reject Racing Ban Bill

Little Rock, Ark., Jan. 29 (AP).—The Arkansas Senate received today a committee recommendation that it reject a proposed bill to outlaw horse racing.

The Senate's cities and towns committee disapproved the measure after two public hearings, one limited to proponents of the measure and the other principally for opponents of the bill. The committee's chairman, Senator Ernest Maner, resides at Hot Springs, home of the State's only horse racing plant.

Supporters of the bill, introduced by Senator J. A. Middleton of Mena, attacked horse racing and parimutuel betting largely on moral grounds. The bill's proponents included representatives of church groups, the State Antisaloon League and the Women's Christian Temperance Union.

Pieces of Haight:

Pounds Accumulates Things, But Misses Pulitzer Prize

Marietta Park, D. C., Jan. 29.

Dear Boss,

I know you didn't marry a newspaper man, Boss, but your wife did and she probably will be interested in reading, at least, a part of this letter.

HAIGHT

I'm one of those scribes with a saving complex—and aren't we all? I save everything but money and sometimes I wonder if it would accumulate as fast as what my darling daughter's mother commonly refers to as "trash." I'm willing to bet 10 to 1, Boss, that if you open any given drawer in our house, close your eyes and put your hand in, you will grasp some paper, clipping, pamphlet, book or scratch paper that is "invaluable" to me."

At most, I'm only an occasional pocket unloader. But when I get tired by carrying the weight I stick this precious junk here or there. At this writing I can truthfully say that drawers of the lamp tables on either side of our davenport are crammed full. It is impossible to pull a book out of our secretary without getting caught in a landslide of my copy paper and handouts. The two drawers underneath are jammed with race chart books, programs and assorted turf literature, although I must say the corner of one drawer is given over to my boy's stamp collection.

In the dining room, I've absolutely been ruled out of the top drawer in the buffet, but otherwise I have a monopoly. The lower drawer has everything in it from a 1934 Kentucky Derby program to a shoe off Whirlaway. I like the buffet, Boss. The two doors slide open into roomy compartments.

The two server drawers hung out the S. R. O. sign a couple of years ago and it is only recently that I established a beachhead in the china cabinet. Already I've filled the drawer and I'm working on the closet underneath. The top, naturally, is filled with china and glassware. Some day I might get a little curtain and take that over, too.

In the cellar, I long since took command of the discarded chifforobe, but upstairs I have some trouble. So far I've been able to command only the far corner of a single bureau drawer, but this time two years ago didn't even have that much of a grip on our server.

This filing system is a pip, Boss. Once in a great while I find something and it's simple. First you accuse everybody in the house of having thrown it out. You pull out a couple of drawers, dig in and finally get disgusted and say something about not being able to keep a thing around here."

I was looking for a certain clipping today. I found everything but what I wanted. Came across one section of the buffet devoted, for the most part, to rejected magazine articles and unfinished books. I haven't tried writing of that sort lately, but after reading some of those 1928 efforts I don't blame publishers for sending them back.

I picked up a Haight short story with the simple title of "D. A." And, Boss, it didn't start off half bad—"Put more scotch and less soda in the next one and I'll tell you about Stonewall Brown." The 500 words that followed, telling about Stonewall's rise from copyboy to reporter to lawyer, were strictly corn.

Then I wrote about Stonewall becoming district attorney and how he was death on gamblers and racketeers. The story goes that he invited me to the courthouse to hear his closing speech in a case that involved a woman who had been caught bookmaking. I looked over the jury and there sitting in the box was Rusty, the doorman at Charles' gambling joint. Stonewall gave his closing address and the jury filed out before I could get to him.

According to the yarn, I decided Rusty would either hold out for acquittal or at least make it a hung jury.

And now I will use the direct writing of the then budding "O. Haight." Here it is:

"On the way down the hall I passed the door of the jury room. I stood on the chair and looked through the transom. The sight was one I anticipated. Rusty was slumped in a chair at the end of a long table, looking straight ahead with the other eleven jurors gathered around him pounding their fists into their hands and yelling in his face.

"That night, the foreman told the judge that the jury had been unable to reach a verdict and he ordered it a mistrial. District Attorney Stonewall Brown raved.

"A week later, I stopped in this very place on the way home from the paper, and sitting behind a tall glass was Rusty.

"I walked up to him boldly and shouted: 'What a fine guy you are, wasting the town's money and insulting our district attorney by making that a hung jury. You know as well as I do that woman was guilty.'

"Rusty replied: 'Yes I did keep that jury from reaching a verdict, but you've got me all wrong. I was the only one holding out for a CONVICTION!' "

At the time, Boss, I thought it was going to win the Pulitzer Prize. As ever, POUNDS HAIGHT.

P. S.—Anybody caught "pleasure driving" last night should be rewarded with a book of "A" coupons, if you know what I mean.

Cavaliers Slight Favorites; Massie To Make Debut as Varsity Mittman

Special Dispatch to The Post

Charlottesville, Va., Jan. 29.—Undefeated boxing teams of Maryland and Virginia throw leather here tomorrow night in one of the outstanding collegiate fistic meetings of the season.

The Cavaliers, with victories over V. P. I. and North Carolina, will be slightly favored over the Old Line team, which has handily defeated Coast Guard Academy, Western Maryland and Army.

Truman Southall, Cavalier coach, will make but one change as he puts Maupin Massie, a Charlottesville lad, into the 120-pound spot he would have filled last week had he not been suffering a cold.

Massie's Debut Delayed

Massie, who won a South Atlantic scholastic championship while boxing for the local Lane High School, was scheduled to have made his varsity debut two weeks ago. But he received a forfeit from the V. P. I. bantamweight and has not yet appeared in the ring this season. He was a freshman regular last year.

With Massie in the opening division the Virginia varsity line-up will include Tom Green, featherweight; Jimmy Miragliotta, lightweight; Cocaptain Willie Barnett, welterweight; Bob Finley, junior-middleweight; Don Niklason, middleweight; Carl Broaddus, light-heavyweight; Cocaptain Milton Parlow, heavyweight.

Acting captain for the evening will be Frank Null, Virginia cocaptain and 155-pounder. Null will not box. He is recovering from a tonsil operation and has had to turn his spot over to Finley for the second Saturday.

Maryland's Line-up

Maryland's announced varsity line-up will include Ray Bradshaw, bantamweight; B111 Kambouris, featherweight; Morris Guerrant, lightweight; Alex Bobenko, welterweight; Ed Rieder, junior-middleweight; John Gilmore, middleweight; Herbert Gunther, light-heavyweight, and Leonard Rodman, heavyweight.

Maryland's jayvee mittmen, unable to make the trip, were forced to cancel their scheduled encounter with the Cavalier jayvee squad. Augusta Military Academy has been scheduled instead and will be met prior to the varsity match.

Turner Plans Conway, Komar Return Scrap

Promoter Joe Turner's duration-of-war heavyweight elimination tournament to uncover a challenger from Turner's Arena may be leading into a return match between Clent Conway, the spindle-legged colored soldier from Fort Dix, N. J., and Paul (Buddy) Komar of McKeesport, Pa.

Turner has Conway pitted against Buddy Knox, Bolling Field corporal, in an eight-rounder Monday night at the arena, and a victory for Conway would, naturally, set the promoter thinking of another Komar-Conway duel. Conway won the first battle, stopping Buddy in five rounds. But since then Komar has made fans forget that defeat by beating Georgie Parks and flattening two other opponents.

It is possible, however, if Knox beats Conway—and the local corporal has the style to do it—he may be matched against Komar.

From New York rumblings of a challenge come from Earl Lowman, the husky Negro boy, known as the "One Man Gang." Lowman, through his manager, Eddie Ross, wants to meet the best at the arena. Lowman was unbeaten in bouts at Uline's.

The semiwindup Monday brings together Danny Petro, the Southeast southpaw, and Wayman Stewart, local Negro scrapper, in an eight-rounder.

In a six-rounder, Roy Lewis, southpaw, will tangle with Taffy Cummings of the Royal British Navy.

Bethesda-C.C. Tops Rockville

Bethesda-Chevy Chase yesterday turned in a 31-16 triumph over Rockville High at Rockville Gym, with Bob Brewer and Joe Slaughter leading the way.

Held to a 17-11 margin at halftime, Bethesda put on steam in the second half and, exhibiting a tight defense, held the Rockvillans to five points. Brewer tallied five field goals and three fouls for 13 points as Slaughter tossed in a quartet of field goals for eight points. Fennell, with eight markers, was the only Rockville player able to score more than once from the field.

C. & P. Reports $207,613 Gain In Year's Net

By S. Oliver Goodman

Record breaking business enabled the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. to report an increase in net income last year in spite of a sharp gain in taxes and expenses.

The company's statement for 1942 showed a net income of $1,716,781, an increase of $207,613 over the 1941 net of $1,509,168.

At the same time the company's investment in telephone plant here was $11,980,730 heavier during 1942 than in the previous year, according to Charles A. Robinson, vice president and general manager.

There were 357,759 telephones in service at the end of December, an increase of 1564 over the previous month. Telephone users made 43,749,000 calls during the month, a new high record and 742,000 more than in December, 1941.

Gross operating revenues for the year were $21,496,243, against $15,830,867 in 1941. Operating expenses soared to $16,492,382 against $11,769,021 in the previous year. Taxes totaled $2,110,206 in 1942, against $1,506,622 in 1941.

For December the company reported a net income of $29,627. Comparison with the same month of 1941 was distorted by the fact that a tax adjustment for the entire year 1941 was made out of December net income.

The company's net gain in telephones for the entire year was 35,835, against 46,702 in 1941. New installations toward the end of 1942 were on a ration basis due to lack of equipment.

Pay-As-You-Go Indorsed

The American Institute of Accountants yesterday was on record for a pay-as-you-go income tax plan.

The Institute's executive committee in a resolution adopted yesterday stated Federal income tax collection on a current basis would "be for the common good, regardless of the fact that there will be fortuitous benefit to some."

Withholding at the source as much of the tax as possible on a current basis would make payment easier for taxpayers and "collection more certain for the Government," the resolution stated.

B. & O. Reports Tenders

R. B. White, president of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, announced that the company had accepted tenders covering $29,275,650 principal amount of bonds and notes under the invitation issued December 21, 1942.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Jan. 29 (AP).—Expectations that the congressional farm bloc would make a determined fight to include all farm-labor costs in computing parity gave a firm tone to grain prices today.

Philadelphia.—Richard Fenton, delivering a school bus from Fort Wayne, Ind., to Philadelphia, drove nearly 700 miles without trouble. Then, only a few blocks from his destination, the bus became jammed under an elevated railway; so badly, in fact, that Fenton had to remove the wheels to free it.

The Federal Diary

Editor's note—Today and every Saturday this column is turned over to Federal employes for their views and comments. Send contributions to Jerry Kluttz, editor.

We're lawyers, but we come as complainants. We allege that there exists in Government agencies a system which we call "Joe sent me. "Joe sent me" and applications are dispensed with. 'Joe sent me' and interviews are waived. "Joe sent me" and the job is yours! Of course we do not refer to mere clerical positions. "Joe" doesn't bother with the hoi polloi . . . he intercedes only for professionals.

We've received high ratings on several legal civil service examinations, but not knowing "Joe," we've been given the run around. We can each list at least 40 active agencies where attorneys were being "recruited' and our applications were politely accepted followed by an interview (frequently polite) which in turn was followed by a letter to-wit:

"We are in receipt of your application. Thank you for filing with us. We regret to inform you that there are no openings at the present time for a person with your qualifications. However we shall be glad to keep your application on file and you will be notified should there be any openings at a future date."

We recognize our responsibility in charging that nepotism or personal patronage in Government is a business trust controlled by "Joe," with interlocking directorates in all the agencies. We have therefore refrained from naming the defendant in our complaint.

But—we have reason to suspect—it's Joe.

Who is this guy Joe? Will you help us ferret him out? We've been working on the following clew: we know he went to Harvard Law Shcool . . . because he's been so loyal to the "old class tie."

But gosh, Mr. Kluttz, we couldn't go to Harvard Law School. We're women!

So one day we donned our trim little suits and rapped on the doors of OPA. We spent the morning filing out heaps of precious paper applications, the afternoon seeing a series of crisp, cold secretaries, and the evening washing our stockings and pressing our blouses to be smart for the next day's interview. Of course, we were eagerly prompt. And cooled our heels for two hours. The pattern was, as in other agencies: "What law school did you attend?" and "Who sent you?"

We could not have gone to Harvard Law School, and Joe certainly didn't send us.

So—we went to the Department of Labor . . . in our trim little suits.

Same routine. Same results. But something new had been added! "If I were you," said one sage counselor, leaning forward intimately, "I'd become a stenographer."

So—we went to WPB . . . starched and hopeful. Same applications, same questions, same answers, accompanied by: "Your background is ideal for this position but I'm already committed to hire my classmate (my frat brother, my nephew, my buddy, my cousin)."

Well, we're not starving. No thanks to Joe!

In our trim little suits we are now, respectively, (a) a radio engineer and (b) a meteorologist.

More Power to you for your advocacy of an extra shopping night for Government workers. That would be infinitely preferable to an hour a week of Government time to shop. It takes a half hour to get to the shopping center from here. I'd like to suggest that retailers for the duration plan their hours to serve those who serve Uncle Sam. The majority of Washington workers are Government employes. Possibly half of them are women. Even men have to shop. All that Government workers need is time and a place to spend the money they earn. Ladies of leisure are out for duration. Moreover, six afternoons a week should be enough for them to shop undisturbed by the employed.

Retailers should give their employees a break by distributing the Thursday night crush over five nights a week. If the hours Monday through Friday were 12 to 8:30 p. m. and Saturday 9:30 to 6, the store employes would have six mornings to sleep late, the lucky devils, and market before work, and have an uninterrupted rest from Saturday evening through Monday noon, another blessing that Government workers do not have. Moreover, it would alleviate the traffic jam during the rush hours both morning and evening.

Why not be realistic and cater to the real buying public, both those who work for money from 9 to 5 and those who work just as hard as volunteers? M. S. K.

As a classification investigator who is constantly on the payraise battle front I should like to offer a suggestion concerning the Government salary question.

Why not change the in-grade promotion period from 18 months to six months granting $60 per annum salary increases to all employes receiving efficiency ratings of good or higher?

Isn't it more logical for a $1440 clerk to be earning $1500, $1560, $1620, etc. over a period of years rather than to try to justify an increasing number of $1620 and $1800 salaries for clerks and stenographers who just can't live on CAF-2? A $60 increase every six months is something to strive for not only for monetary benefits but for morale and accomplishment purposes as well.

The overtime pay increase should have been the answer but, take it from one who knows, the cry remains the same, "Yes, but everyone else got it too!"

800 Attend Birthday Dinner Here

Al Jolson and Other Screen, Radio Stars Appear at Fete In Mayflower

More than 800 celebrants jammed the ballroom of the Mayflower Hotel for dinner last night to celebrate the President's sixty-first birthday, in spite of the ban on pleasure driving and poor traffic conditions.

The dinner was the big public event of the two days celebration that began with the Commissioners' welcome to the visiting entertainers in the District Building in the morning, and continued with the visits of the film and radio stars to Walter Reed Hospital and the Naval Medical Center, where they entertained the wounded of the present war.

10-Course Dinner

And whatever the shortages of foods may be, the $10 guests sat down to a 10-course dinner which included crabflake gumbo, breast of capon, Smithfield ham, tomato surprise and parfait Old Glory, which was a combination of strawberry vanilla and pistachio ice creams.

Seated at the table of honor were the visiting stars—Washington's Al Jolson, master of ceremonies, Bert Lytell, Marjorie Lawrence, Edgar Bergen (Charlie McCarthy didn't eat), Loretta Young, Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Bonita Granville, Roddy MacDowell, Robert Young, Laraine Day, Geraldine Fitzgerald, Lucy Monroe, Anita Louise, Roy Rogers, Dennis Morgan, Lynn Bari, James Cagney, and Janet Blair. Also at the head table were Brig. Gen. Albert Cox, who acted as toastmaster, Corporation Counsel Richmond B. Keech, who annually organizes the President's Birthday Ball celebrations, and District Commissioners Guy Mason, Charles W. Kutz and John Russell Young.

"Red-Blooded" Humor

The entertainment after the dinner was introduced by Jolson, who warned the guests that he had been entertaining troops for the past months, and that his humor was liable to be pretty red-blooded. It was, but none of the blue-blooded guests seemed to mind.

Marjorie Lawrence, blonde Metropolitan Opera star who was afflicted with infantile paralysis two years ago, was wheeled out on the stage to sing "Invictus." Charlie McCarthy, released from his suitcase, delivered typical irreverent comments on the guests and on Washington, and Jolson concluded the program with some of his best known songs.

Theater Appearances

After the appearances at the Mayflower, the Hollywood Caravan set out to make personal appearances at the Earle, Howard and Capitol Theaters, where fans had been lining the streets four deep to get into the theaters.

At the District Building yesterday morning, McCarthy and Bergen stole the show, both in the amount of applause given by the massed clerks and stenographers waiting to see their favorite stars emerge from the elevators, and in the amount of laughter responding to the broadcast remarks.

While most of the other guests read brief expressions of appreciation at being allowed to participate in the celebration of the President's Birthday and in the fight against infantile paralysis, McCarthy insulted his District hosts ("Yes, aren't they a bunch of messes.") and showed concern over the quality of luncheon that will be served today at the White House. He hoped that Mrs. Roosevelt would be a good cook, but rather feared that she would cook up a dish of fricasseed New Englanders.

Young Welcomes Stars

Commissioner John Russell Young, welcoming the stars, regretted that priorities prevented his giving them the keys to the city, and offered instead the best wishes and appreciation of the Commissioners.

After the reception, which was broadcast over two local radio stations and transcribed for rebroadcast by the other stations, the stars went in a fleet of taxicabs to Walter Reed Hospital, where they put on an impromptu show in the auditorium and in threes and fours visited the wards where patients were bedridden. They spent nearly an hour there, and then went on to the Naval Medical Center at Bethesda, where also the wards were visited.

Today's schedule—classed by the Hollywood visitors as the "hardest but most thrilling" that a movie star's career involves—includes a luncheon at the White House, and personal appearances at the dances to be held at the Shoreham, Wardman Park, Mayflower, Hamilton, Statler, Willard and Washington Hotels and the Lincoln Colonnade. After this routine is over, they will appear at the Stage Door Canteen for the servicemen.

Alexandria Hospital May Get Addition

By Mary Spargo
Post Staff Writer

New construction to furnish 75 beds for Alexandria Hospital was virtually assured when the governmental division of the War Production Board yesterday decided to reverse a previous veto and recommend a building program.

Decision followed two conferences of WPB, United States Public Health Service representatives and Federal Works Agency officials, hospital and city representatives and Representative Howard W. Smith (Democrat) of Virginia, The Post learned.

Final decision will rest with the facilities clearance board of WPB, it was learned, but little doubt is felt that the board will accept the recommendations of its experts.

Purchase of St. Mary's Convent, near the hospital, which was held up when the expansion plans originally recommended by the Federal Works Agency were vetoed by WPB, will now go through, it is anticipated. The convent, whose sale price was $100,000, will be turned into a nurses' home and training school. The original FWA program called for a 200-bed addition.

A long wing will be extended in back of the hospital for the patients. Because of the small size of the lot a four-story building will be erected. Alexandria already owns a sizeable stock of the necessary steel.

One of the major factors in altering the decision of the Government division, The Post was informed, was the display by Robert G. Whitton, hospital administrator, of records showing that the hospital served a territory as far south as Manassas, Va.

Whitton, on January 19, gave a public statement declaring his intention to fight the unfavorable decision of WPB. At that time Whitton hotly declared that people in Alexandria had died because they were not able to get into a hospital.

Mileham Asks More Raid Tests

Necessity for more air-raid tests in order to keep the warden service and the public in training was stressed by Chief Air Raid Warden William J. Mileham, guest of a hearing on civilian defense before the police and fire protection committee of the Federation of Citizens Associations last night.

Mileham declared he thought tests should come twice a month and should be of longer duration than recent tests. He also declared that wardens should be notified that a test would come within a certain span of days, principally because in case of a real raid they would be obliged to enter houses and turn out lights left on, but in case of a test they were not permitted to do so.

At no time was he consulted about the reorganization of the Civilian Defense set-up in the District, Mileham told the committee, although he heads the largest group of volunteers in the city.

Members of the committee pressed him for an opinion on the practicality for family use of the stirrup pumps now on sale for general purchase. Mileham avoided a definite expression of opinion, although committee members pointed out that it takes three persons to man such a pump, and it must be kept in constant condition.

Within the past two weeks, subsequent to criticism in The Post of the civilian defense organization, the air raid warden service has received more equipment from National OCD than in all the previous months of its existence, it was revealed in Mileham's statements. The chief air warden declared that receipt of the equipment had greatly raised the morale of his service.

He denied that his wardens had been negligent in calling for equipment, as charged by Col. Lemuel Bolles, executive assistant to United States Coordinator Young, and said that in most cases wardens had to hire transfer companies to move the goods and that it was not always possible to get the trucks for the job. He denied that Bolles had ever warned him his wardens wouldn't be ready for the equipment when it came.

In response to questions, Mileham admitted that meetings between the chiefs of the various OCD services were "very rare." He also said he saw no need at all for a city-wide campaign for funds for OCD, such as has been scheduled in May.

Arbuckle Convicted of Embezzlement

The trial was presided over by Justice Bolitha J. Laws, who received the verdict at 5:40 after the jury had been out for 1 hour and 45 minutes. Justice Laws ordered Arbuckle in court at 2 p. m. Tuesday, at which time, he indicated, additional charges of contempt of court might be brought against the defendant.

Arbuckle appeared pale but unshaken when the verdict was read. He was immediately committed into the custody of the United States marshal.

Assistant United States Attorney John L. Laskey had argued to the jury that the defense had hung their case on the fact that Robert C. Henderson, an associate of Arbuckle's, had testified in open court that he was present at a meeting between Arbuckle and his assistant in the management of the restaurant, Edward H. King, at which times 20 envelopes, containing the missing funds had been turned over by Arbuckle to King. Henderson's testimony had corroborated similar testimony given earlier in the trial by Arbuckle.

Laskey called the testimony of Henderson's perjury and reminded the jury that Henderson had repudiated his own testimony when he admitted that according to letters introduced by the prosecution he was probably in Canada at the time the alleged transaction was supposed to have taken place.

Henderson was held in $500 bond Thursday by Justice Laws, who after excusing the jury, told him that by the repudiation of his own testimony he had "seriously imposed upon the dignity of the court." Henderson, now out on bond, will also appear before Justice Laws at 2 p. m. Tuesday to answer to contempt charges.

Defense Counsels Paul Sedgewick and Warren E. Magee, cited the fact that deposit slips had been introduced as evidence purporting to show that King had deposited a portion of the funds which Arbuckle stands convicted of embezzling.

Sedgewick denied there had been any perjury in the trial but explained the conflicting testimony of both Arbuckle and Henderson as due to the 4½ years which had elapsed since the transaction was alleged to have taken place.

Under the law Arbuckle is liable to five years imprisonment on each of the 10 counts of the indictment. Justice Laws did not indicate when sentence would be passed.

Navy Band Orchestra Gives Better, Varied Performance

By Ray C. B. Brown

Lieut. Charles Brendler conducts the United States Navy Band Orchestra in Departmental Auditorium on Friday night. Soloist: Oscar Shumski. Program: Overture to "Mignon" (Thomas), Polovtsian Dances from "Knaz Igor" (Borodin), Violin Concerto No. 2 in D minor (Vieniavski), Symphony No. 5 in E minor (Chaikovski).

Despite the unpleasantness of slush underfoot and the tardiness of transportation, there was a good attendance last evening to welcome the U. S. Navy Band Orchestra in its first concert in a more central location. The spacious quadrature, the fluted pillars and the gilded splendor of Departmental Auditorium provided a marked contrast to the organization's old home in the sail loft at the Navy Yard and to its recent abiding place in Marine Barracks Hall. Symbolically the new surroundings corresponded to the transformation in the orchestra itself since the selective service brought many young and talented musicians into the personnel.

BROWN

The roster of musicians now contains the names of men who were formerly listed as members of several of our major symphony orchestras, and there has been a resultant alteration in the sound of the ensemble. One noted last night the very fine quality of the string section, the mellow resonance of the horns, the individual tone of the first clarinet and the first trumpet, and other ameliorations in the general sonority. It is an orchestra to which one can listen with pleasure in the tone-color and in the plasticity of performance. The consentience of the playing is excellent, and Lieut. Charles Brendler must rejoice in the kind of material with which he has to work.

A program of popular compositions celebrated the house-warming. The romantic overture to Ambroise Thomas, "Mignon," was followed by the excitingly barbaric dances from Borodin's "Knaz Igor," and the major work was Chaikovski's fifth symphony. All the readings were enjoyable for clarity of outlines and tonal expressiveness. To test the acoustics of the hall, the reviewer tried seats at different angles, and came to the conclusion that the orchestra would sound still more effectively if reflecting screens were placed at the back and sides of the platform.

Oscar Shumski, the 26-year-old Philadelphian whose rapid rise to prominence preceded his enlistment, was the soloist in Vieniavski's D minor concerto, a work that demands technical expertness with bow and fingers. He displayed both in his fluent handling of the arabesque passages, and the refinement of his tone was eloquently projected in the second movement. His artistry is nicely compounded of skill and sensitivity, of easy, unforced technique and poetic feeling.

Shadid was arrested August 6 after a policeman had operated a pinball machine in his store and had been rewarded with a free game for high score. Then to prove the point that this was gambling the prosecution brought the machine into court and not only allowed the jury to play it, but furnished them with slugs with which to play.

Where the slugs came from the prosecution wouldn't say, but the jury seemed to enjoy the play and they didn't seem to think they had gambled.

Before she could open the door to her room, she said, the man grabbed her by the throat and choked her unconscious.

When she came to, she related, she was lying on the floor of the entrance hallway, her wool slacks and underclothing torn off. Her head was cut apparently from striking her head on the floor.

Police matrons took her to Gallinger Hospital for examination and treatment.

Bergen and McCarthy Have Pet War Project

By Peggy Preston

Doing their bit in the war effort is nothing new to Edgar Bergen and his vituperative cohort, young Charlie McCarthy, who are to be seen dashing around town this weekend on behalf of the President's Infantile Paralysis Fund Drive.

In fact one of their lesser known projects that has a definite place in today's war set-up was begun more than three years ago. It is a foundation to aid student nurses and to date they have helped graduate 14 nurses and have 54 more still in training.

"It's tough on my allowance," Charlie allows. "But I figure a pretty nurse is good for my health." Edgar Bergen, as the senior partner, is apt to take the project more seriously.

A onetime medical student, the screen and radio star decided a few years ago to put his excess funds into channels that to him seem the most worth while.

"There are many scholarships offered student nurses now," he said yesterday. "But scores of girls who aspire to be nurses have not the incidental funds to carry them through. These are the ones we try to help."

Make Films for Classrooms

In addition to this, Edgar and Charlie, within the last year, have supervised the making of actual motion picture films in hospitals which are used to augment nurse's training schedules. The films are the first of their kind to be made and used in classroom work, and have received favorable praise from medical associations.

With the demand for nurses growing daily, Mr. Bergen hopes to enlarge his foundation this year. "The drive to interest women in nursing is not going forward as well as it should," he points out, "due, I think, to the fact that the three years of training are costly in a day when women can step into ready-made, well-paying jobs. Our funds are available to all seeking financial help."

Pair Have Heavy Schedule

The firm of McCarthy-Bergen have a heavy schedule on their hands these days. Charlie was frozen in his job by the OWI and Edgar has to stay around to see that he sticks to the job. Last summer they made a trip to Alaska to visit the Army camps and were about to go to Africa when their new boss, the United States Government, decreed that it was best to stay here where they can broadcast to millions of men all over the world, via short wave, than to several thousand in one locality.

Their regular Sunday night broadcast over with, they leave Hollywood on an Army plane, accompanied by a couple of officers. They make 10 personal appearances a week at service centers in Texas, California, Arizona and other nearby States. In the meantime they work up their program for the next Sunday night, which is picked up in far-flung stations. In remote regions, where the station cannot receive the broadcast, records of the same are dropped by airplane.

The result is that the majority of their fan mail these days is from men in uniform. "In fact our program is pretty much their own program, for they don't hesitate a minute to inform you what they do and don't like."

Charlie Has All the Rank

Charlie himself is completely at home with men of the armed forces. In addition to holding the rank of master sergeant with the Army Air Corps, he is a private in the Marines. The Navy, so far has eluded his ambitions, but he hopes to make the grade yet. Edgar was within two days of a commission in the Navy this year when the OWI decided he could serve better on the radio.

"So far Charlie has all the rank in our outfit," he said. "I suppose it is because he outtalks me."

The pair arrived in Washington yesterday morning and are going through a whirlwind personal-appearance tour with other Hollywood notables this weekend. They will do their Sunday night broadcast from here and then return to California via plane, to begin their round of camps once more.

NEW HATS FOR OLD

By Jeanne Contini

This seems to be the season when most good hats develop a nervous break-down . . . the sparkle leaves the sequin, the backbone goes out of the quill, brims look like a stormy night on the Atlantic. The same feeling that prompts you to put a fresh lingerie collar on the old navy dress, makes a shelf-full of winter-worn hats more discouraging than ever. On the other hand, the end of January with its beguiling promises of spring alternating between blizzards, is provocative but hardly the sort of weather in which to risk a brand new bonnet. Besides, unless you have an emergency need for a new hat right now, it's better to get as much out of the old ones as possible until you have a clear picture of your spring wardrobe. So let's take down the hat-box, remove tired trimmings, and see what we have to work with.

LAST YEAR'S LID? . . . Visit one of the neckwear departments and pick out a yard of fullish ruching. Starch and stitch around the underside of the brim. Elective but pretty, is a length of chenille dotted veiling tied round the crown into a big crisp bow in back. The ends should be long enough to bring around and cross under your chin.

CURDLED BRIM? . . . The crown, if round, may become a calot, if high, may be converted into a shallow fez or pill-box. Cut off the brim and sew tape around the inner edge of the crown to keep it from stretching. Hold it to your hair with a glorified hatpin. A plain one, felt covered costs about a quarter. Explore the possibilities of a triple bow of striped or plaid taffeta ribbon. If you have an extra pair of white cotton gloves, try sewing a band around the cuff to match your hat.

A priceless but SHAPELESS FELT? . . . At the point in the brim that comes just above your left temple, make three rows of shirring about 5 inches wide and 2 inches deep on the inner edge. Band the crown with narrow white pique finished with a tailored bow or knotted ends. Turn up the brim at shirring and tack to crown. The result ought to be a profile hat with enough swashbuckle for D'Artagnan.

A BERET, good, but dull? . . . This one is as easy as eating apple pie. In a nonce you can acquire the chic "Gibson Girl" effect with two yards of maline draped in the way most becoming to your face. But remember to set your beret straight.

THE UNDRESSED BACK VIEW? . . . If your new upswept hair-do leaves your favorite cheltons or pillboxes sitting like bumps on a log, try the hatpin trick again. But this time with flowers. A small bunch of violets or a carnation heading each pin will do wonders. Sheer veiling may be added if you prefer a softer line.

Wild or tame,
With stocking seams crooked or on the T.
I'd never start dictating late in the day,
Nor chew my cigar,
As I used words bizarre,
And for all the lunches I'd gladly pay.

HELP, DOMESTIC

Will someone help my desperate plight?
A maid of any kind will my soul delight,
Of the entire house she may be the sultana,
Occupy the guest room, play the grand piano;
No guests of mine shall darken the door,
Though she may entertain boy friend, husband or paramour,
And what is more—on our 3 gallons of gas,
My husband will chauffeur her to the movies in class.

FOR SALE, MISCELLANEOUS

Motor cars and high-heeled shoes,
Long evening gowns with backs not opaque,
Steak and butter knives, travelling bags,
And other antiques of various make.
Including a fine bridge luncheon set,
Will be sold for very little jake.

ROOM, FURNISHED

My suburban home is in Chippendale wood,
It's a very lovely neighborhood!
A room and bawth I'd be willing to rent,
Since the income taxes make such a dent,
To a man, of course, neat and refined,
A naval officer I have in mind,
A captain or commander with lots of gold braid,
At least rank above lieutenant, junior grade,

PERSONAL

A gentleman I'd like to meet,
Past 38, or not yet 18,
Who has a car of any year,
And a B card for gasoline.

Martha Ellyn's Platter Chatter

Are you moaning because you don't have enough meat entrees in a week to make the meals interesting? Well, weep no more, because there's a silver lining. The answer is to make an Extender Meat Loaf.

And by serving this meat loaf you will not only be offering an appealing food, but will be guarding the family's diet against inadequacy of proteins, vitamin B1 and other food factors for which meat is noteworthy. This loaf uses oatmeal which has an amazingly plentiful source of the two elements.

While you are baking the meat loaf you can also bake potatoes. Here's the recipe:

EXTENDER MEAT LOAF.

Combine 1½ pounds ground beef chuck, ¼ pound ground pork loin ends, ¼ cup onion, cut fine, 1 cup oats, quick or regular, uncooked; 2½ teaspoons salt, ¼ teaspoon pepper, 1 teaspoon mustard, ¼ cup catsup, 1 well-beaten egg and 1 cup water. Mix well. Pack firmly into loaf pan. Bake in moderately hot oven, 375 degrees, for 1 hour.

Baked potatoes will be a splendid accompaniment to this loaf. They are especially good when the insides are scooped out, mashed, and then put back into the shells, returned to the oven and browned. The recipe for preparing them follows:

STUFFED BAKED POTATOES

Prepare 3 large potatoes or 6 small ones for baking. Bake in a very hot oven, 450 degrees, for approximately 40 minutes. Remove from oven, cut in halves lengthwise, scoop out the inside. Mash thoroughly. Add 1 tablespoon butter or margarine, 1 tablespoon hot milk and salt and pepper. Refill the shells and bake for 5 to 8 minutes in a very hot oven. To give a glazed appearance, add 1 well-beaten egg white to potato mixture before refilling. Serves 6.

If the flavor of cheese is desired, add ½ cup grated cheese to the potato mixture before refilling. Sprinkle top with grated cheese and bake in very hot oven to reheat and brown as directed above.

Rationing Made Easy

How can householders get additional fuel oil in emergencies?

The OPA has just announced an emergency ration arrangement which will enable a consumer who is without oil to buy a limited amount even though he is without currently valid coupons. This "emergency ration" can be used by those who "face a serious threat to health or property" and only one such emergency purchase can be made by a consumer during a heating year.

Under this "emergency ration" a householder may buy up to 10 per cent of his total year's ration (not over 50 gallons). If possible, he should turn over to the dealer coupons redeemable in a future heating period. The dealer will present an "emergency receipt" which the householder must sign and, if he is unable to turn over any coupons, he must state why he lacks these. The address and number of the local ration board to which he applied for his fuel oil rations and the purpose for which the fuel is to be used must also be noted on this "emergency receipt."

Dates To Remember: Coffee—stamp No. 28, Ration Book I, is good for 1 pound through February 8; sugar—stamp No. 10 is good for 3 pounds through January 31.

Women's Club News

By Genevieve Reynolds

Just when you think—a new club couldn't appear, there are so many—up bobs a new one. At least one you've never heard of before. This time it's the Guadaloupe Society — the only woman's organization to memorialize the Mexican War or any of that historic period.

GENEVIEVE REYNOLDS

Well, the Guadaloupe Society grew out of an officers' club, which was formed after the Battle of Monterrey by the commissioned officers stationed there. Original club was known as the "Aztec." All members of the present G. S. are descendants of officers of the organizing group. By the way, the name was taken from the place, Guadaloupe, Hidalgo, Mexico, where the treaty terminating the war was signed.

A meeting of the members of G. S. is scheduled 1 p. m. Tuesday at Hotel 2400. Mrs. Raymond Flower, president of the Soldiers, Sailors and Marines Club, will be the chief speaker. Also appearing on the program will be Miss Anita Phipps, D. C. president of A. W. V. S., and Mrs. George Weed Wallace, club historian. President of the group is Mrs. Noble Newport Potts.

Two past presidents of the club, Mrs. Golden l'Hommedieu Ruggles, wife of General Ruggles, and Miss Sophie Pearce Casey, are expected to be present.

Mrs. Coblentz Speaks

No longer are juvenile writers forced to write drippy, sentimental books that eliminate all blood and battle. The attack on Pearl Harbor opened up a new field—it bombed the "isms" out of juvenile literature, according to Mrs. Catherine Cates Coblentz, writer of juveniles, who was guest of honor and speaker at a tea given Wednesday by the District League of American Pen Women.

Mrs. Helen Orr Watson, fiction chairman of the league, introduced the speaker. The tea was given in honor of authors of juvenile books, including Ellis Credle, Eloise Lownsberry, Delia Goetz, Hilda Van Stockum and Mrs. Huntington Carpenter. Mrs. Nelle Var D. Smith, president of the District League, attended the tea following the speech. Mathilda Kolb Bartlett was tea chairman, with several assistants.

The North-South players of today's deal skipped right past game into a six-spade contract, and South brought home the slam by cleverly choosing the right discard. West opened the heart jack; the queen was played from dummy and East's ace won. He shifted to the diamond jack and declarer went right up with the ace.

With his diamond loser bared, South's impulse was strong to rush over to dummy, cash the heart king and discard the dreadful diamond. After a moment's thought, however, declarer realized that this play would not solve the problem of the club loser. It would simply assure that the slam bid would be set.

South saw that he could avoid losing either a club or a diamond if he could set up a long club, so he cashed two high trumps, ending with the lead in dummy, and then played the heart king, throwing off a club, rather than a diamond from his hand. Next the king and ace of clubs were laid down and a third club was trumped by South. Happily the adverse clubs broke 3-3, and South was able to reenter dummy with a trump and cash the thirteenth club, discarding the losing diamond from the closed hand. The last three tricks were taken with high spades, and declarer made six-odd, losing only the heart ace.

That Wild Arnold Girl

By Irene Lonnen Ernhart

The story thus far: Jenny Arnold, the Cinderella of the Arnold family, adopts an attitude of brassy indifference toward everything as a defense against the imporitions of her older sister, Madeline, and her mother, Celia, whose middle-aged indiscretions have already involved her with a scheming young dance instructor, Tony Torrento. Even Jenny's father, whom she deeply loves, regards her as "impossible." She realizes for the first time that her hardness is really only veneer when she finds herself falling in love with Bill Winslow, Madeline's fiance. Perry's former husband suddenly reappears at the Arnold home.

Chapter XVII

A disagreeable chill chased its way down Jenny's spine. She and Celia might never have been there. Madeline seemed oblivious. Had she forgotten her brand new engagement to Bill so quickly or was this only an act to please her vanity?

Perry smiled. "Same old Madeline," he murmured. "Cut as a button and just as hard." He laughed. Before even Madeline knew what he was about he had caught her in his arms and kissed her fiercely.

She pushed away from him. "After all——Perry," she gasped. But her eyes were not protesting. They held a strange light.

"That wasn't necessary Perry!" Celia Arnold said sharply.

He turned, a picture of laughing insolence. "I suppose not," he said, "but it was fun."

A painful little silence descended. Madeline's pretty mouth drew into a pout. She went close to him and touched his coat sleeve possessively. "How long are you going to be in town, darling?" she purred.

Perry's pale eyes narrowed as he looked down at her. "Long enough to carry you off to lunch with me," he retorted, "unless there are strong objections." His insolent glance flicked toward Celia Arnold. "And in that case perhaps I'll take Jenny."

Madeline pouted again and her restless little hand grasped his arm now. "I'll go!" she said, piqued. "It'll be amusing—to dine in public with my—former husband—especially since no one around here knows that he is just that!"

Jenny's mother turned to her furiously when the taxi swirled off down the drive. "Why didn't you offer to—to go to lunch with him, Jenny?" she cried. "Why didn't you do something? What if Bill finds out about the whole thing?"

"Isn't that Madeline's responsibility?" Jenny answered coldly. She turned to go back upstairs to her room. She didn't want any lunch now. She felt much too upset.

When Bud Nelson phoned half an hour later and suggested that the bunch go somewhere that evening together, she was relieved. Maybe out with her own little group of friends, old friends, she'd forget all the unpleasantness her family seemed to be involved in. Anyway she couldn't stay home. Bill and Madeline were to discuss with mother plans for the wedding.

The Nelsons and Barney Ames were in a mocking mood that evening about her job.

"Dad says you're going to launch your filing career tomorrow morning in his office," Barney joked. "Jenny the little file clerk!"

"Sounds like something out of Horatio Alger, doesn't it?" Patty Nelson said, laughingly.

"Don't be like that," Bud said. "If she's going to work it's probably because she's got some perfectly good reason tucked away in that neat head of hers."

There were a dozen of them in the crowd and they went dancing at the Skytower Club, their favorite place. Jenny did find it good to be among her own friends tonight. She would have found it still better to have felt as carefree and careless as she had felt the last time the bunch had been together dancing at the Skytower, less than two weeks ago. But one thing to be thankful for, she wouldn't run into her mother with Torrento tonight.

She did, however, see Perry. He came up and asked her to dance. The others in the crowd eyed him warily. He'd never been popular with the bunch. Only with Jenny. Possibly because he was so much older.

Jenny remembered what Bud Nelson, crazy about her himself even then, had said when she'd become so infatuated with Perry that time. "Why Jenny, you mustn't fall in love with him. He's a lot older than you and anyway—he's been around too much.

"Why did you come back really, Perry?" she asked after a moment.

"Mainly I suppose because I was broke and a little tired of playing around and getting nowhere. A black sheep always comes back eventually. Black sheep and bad pennies, you know."

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

Darlan's Surprise Intervention in Africa

HERE are some of the backstage factors faced by Roosevelt and Churchill in working out a solution to the North African political mess.

The inside story goes back to the days before the landing of American troops when all the top political leaders in North Africa knew that an American expedition was coming. The Berlin radio heralded this weeks before, and when the first Allied convoy arrived at Gibraltar to wait for another, the Nazis even broadcast the name of every ship.

But the Nazis and the high-ranking French made one mistake. They never dreamed that British and United States ships would dare come inside the Mediterranean and land at Algiers. They thought the landings would be only at Casablanca and Dakar. So, to meet that attacks, General Nogues shifted his troops to Casablanca.

That was why the fighting was stiff around Casablanca, and why Algiers and neighboring ports surrendered immediately. That was also why Admiral Darlan was taken by surprise at Algiers. He never dreamed we would land that far east.

Immediately after the landing, United States Minister Robert Murphy pulled his trump card, Gen. Honore Giraud, who appealed to all Frenchmen to lay down their arms. However General Giraud proved not to be such a trump card after all. His appeal fell flat.

Darlan Intervenes

One day later, Admiral Darlan, then confined to his quarters by an American guard, sent word that he wanted to see General Eisenhower. When Eisenhower arrived, accompanied by Bob Murphy, Darlan, pointing to the continued fighting, said:

"I can stop all this."

He explained that aged Marshal Petain had given him authority, if the United States staged more than a mere commando raid, to throw French North Africa against the Nazis. Darlan attached certain conditions, among them the provision that he be high commissioner of North Africa. These, Eisenhower and Murphy accepted, and cabled Washington.

When General Marshall and Admiral Leahy received the cable they reported immediately at the White House. The President's reaction was explosive. He asked what we were going to do with that so-and-so.

"Keep him and use him," was the reply.

Roosevelt reluctantly agreed, later issuing a statement explaining the "temporary expedient."

Unquestionably this temporary expedient saved American lives and was worth taking. Perhaps also it was worth the severe psychological set-back it cost us in France, where some 40 million people who had hailed Roosevelt as a hero, could not understand why he should now work with tyrants.

State Dept. Chapter

Then came the death of Darlan, and a new chapter. This new chapter, from the State Department's viewpoint, had every reason to succeed. It was the plan the State Department had nurtured so carefully for months. They had never expected Darlan had built all their plans on General Giraud. So now came the big moment to really show that Secretary Hull's long criticized policy of cooperating with Vichy was justified.

General Giraud had been handpicked by Bob Murphy months before and groomed for the job of taking over in North Africa, but the means by which Murphy picked him are significant.

Actually, Giraud was picked for Murphy by Jacques Lemaigre-Dubreuil, head of the French Association of Taxpayers. This is a reactionary lobbying organization with not as much standing as the National Association of Manufacturers in the United States of America, but with the same general aim of reducing taxes to big business and keeping power in the hands of the ruling families.

In addition, Lemaigre-Dubreuil belonged to the Fascist right wing, and led the disastrous Fascist disturbance in Paris in 1934. In other words, the naive and charming Bob Murphy placed his trust, and the future fate of the French people, in the hands of a man as reactionary as Tom Girdler, as Fascist as William Dudley Pelley, and as isolationist as the Chicago Tribune's Robert McCormick.

The Fascists Move In

Lemaigre-Dubreuil entertained beautifully, knew all the "best" people, and Murphy gradually found himself swimming easily through this delightful upper-crust French society, far removed from the real people of France.

In fact, the last thing these French Fascists wanted was the return of real democracy. They no more believed in the ideals of Franklin Roosevelt than did the Nazi industrialists who put Hitler into power.

Yet, Murphy, the representative of Franklin Roosevelt, plus other members of the American Embassy and consulates, trusted them as brothers and co-workers in the delicate problem of getting the intensely democratic people of France back into the trenches against Hitler.

The details by which Lemaigre-Dubreuil secured the cooperation of General Giraud remain secret. Someday they will leak out, and when they do, it will not be a pretty picture.

But for the time being, it is sufficient to know that General Giraud, a man of the extreme right who once said, "They (the Germans) have not perhaps got liberty, but there is certainly neither disorder nor anarchy," was picked by Murphy to appeal to 40 million Frenchmen who once staged a bloody revolution for Liberty, Equality, Fraternity, and to persuade them to join the Allied cause.

Armed Forces Service to Be Tomorrow

The annual service for the families of men in the armed forces will be held tomorrow at 3:30 p. m. in Washington Cathedral, with the Bishop of Washington, the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, as preacher, and Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox as speaker. The service will begin at 3:30 instead of at the usual 4 o'clock hour for Sunday afternoon services in the Cathedral, and will be preceded by a half-hour program of music played by the Army Forces Band from Bolling Field. Under leadership of Capt. Alf Heiberg. The musical program will begin at 3 p. m.

This annual service, formerly a memorial service for the National Guard, has been broadened during the war to include all of the armed forces and their families in and around the District of Columbia. Invitations to attend the service have been issued to the Government officials, members of the Senate and House of Representatives and officers of the armed forces stationed in the Capital.

In addition to the Cathedral clergymen, three prominent Washington clergymen will participate in tomorrow's service. They are the Rev. Dr. Albert J. McCartney, pastor of Covenant-First Presbyterian Church; the Rev. Dr. Frederick Brown Harris, pastor of Foundry Methodist Church and Chaplain of the Senate, and Rabbi Norman Gerstenfeld of the Washington Hebrew Congregation.

A color guard, displaying flags of the church, Nation and District, will march in the procession of choir and clergy.

During the service the choir of men and boys under the direction of Acting Organist and Choirmaster Ellis C. Varley will sing familiar hymns and anthems, and a corps of buglers from the Air Forces Band will sound "taps." The band will also play the National Anthem at the conclusion of the service.

At the 11 o'clock service of morning prayer the Rev. Theodore C. Wedel, canon chancellor of the Cathedral, will preach. Holy Communion will be celebrated tomorrow at 7:30 and 9:30 a. m.

During the week daily services will be held in the Cathedral at 7:30 a. m., noon and 4 p. m.

Church Drive Of 16 Faiths Successful

A Nation-wide poll of the churches of 16 faiths, which participated in the first part of the United Church Canvass last fall, reveals that the unified effort increased contributions to the church, created better community spirit, and enlisted the support of laymen.

Due to increased war services, world relief work and ministry to those in the armed forces, it was decided for the first time in history to hold a united church canvass. Sixteen religious bodies, Protestant, Catholic and Jewish combined last fall, November 15 to December 6, to initiate part 1 of the Nation-wide, simultaneous canvass.

Charles E. Wilson, vice chairman of the War Production Board, accepted the chairmanship of the sponsoring committee.

The survey, which was completed this week, indicates that the campaign reached hundreds of communities and accomplished splendid results wherever held.

"The success of the first part of the United Church Canvass gives us encouragement," the Rev. Dr. Earl Frederick Adams, New York, chairman of the planning committee, declared yesterday at the national headquarters, 297 Fourth Avenue, New York City.

"Many other local communities, in all parts of the Nation, will join the second phase of the canvass, February 21 to March 14," Dr. Adams added.

Congress Heights Congregation Bids Farewell to Its Pastor

The Rev. Richardson Had Served Church For 35 Years

The congregation of Congress Heights Baptist Church turned out en masse Thursday night to say farewell to the Rev. Edward E. Richardson, their pastor, who is retiring from the ministry. The reception was in charge of the Woman's Society of which Mrs. N. G. Stamp is president.

Dr. Richardson who will preach his farewell sermons tomorrow, has the unique record of not only serving one church for 38 years but of also not missing a Sunday in church or Sunday school in all that time. Congress Heights has been his only pulpit.

When Dr. Richardson went on a world tour in 1932, he organized a Sunday School class on shipboard to keep this attendance record intact.

Dr. Richardson early in life began the study of medicine, and for six years taught medicine at George Washington University, where he also was teacher of philosophy from 1911 to 1938. He was recently elected for the thirty-fourth year as president of the Society for Philosophical Inquiry here. He also is president of the Congress Heights Progressive Association and of the Washington Baptist Bible School.

While he is officially retiring, Dr. Richardson will not be going out of harness, he said yesterday in an interview. While staying with his daughter, Miss Elizabeth L. Richardson, Y. W. C. A. secretary at Pottstown, Pa., he expects to catch up on his memoirs and other writing he's had to put off because of the pressure of clerical duties.

The Congress Heights congregation has elected him pastor emeritus.

'Service of Lights' Tomorrow

The Service of Lights, traditional Epiphany-tide ceremony, will be held tomorrow at 8 p. m. at St. John's Episcopal Church, Lafayette Square, with "Christ the Light of the World" as its theme.

The ancient customs of Candlemas Day will be observed, including walking in procession with lighted tapers. The "Candelaria" begins with a darkened church to represent the moral and spiritual darkness of man before the coming of the Light of Revelation.

Gradually, as the prophecies are read and revelation grows and the high points in the life of Christ are given, candles in the chancel will be lighted.

From these, in turn, the candles of the congregation are lighted, one from another, showing the responsibility of each Christian individual to communicate his light to his neighbor. At the close of the service all will march out in order, bearing the Light of the Christian Gospel, shedding its bright rays into the darkness of the world's night.

Christian Science Lesson-Sermon Topic Is 'Love'

The Christian Science lesson-sermon for tomorrow is "Love." Services are held in all churches and societies at 11 a. m. and repeated at 8 p. m., except in Third at 5 p. m. Sunday School is at 11 a. m. All are invited to attend the services, and the Wednesday evening meeting, at 8 o'clock.

Among the citations comprising the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible: "There is no fear in love; but perfect love casteth out fear: because fear hath torment. He that feareth is not made perfect in love." (I John 4:18.)

The lesson-sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Every trial of our faith in God makes us stronger. The more difficult seems the material condition to be overcome by Spirit, the stronger should be our faith and the purer our love."

2 D. C. Pastors Entering Army Next Week

Two prominent congregations tomorrow will bid Godspeed to ministers having resigned to enter the Army as chaplains, serving God and country.

Dr. Paul D. Wilbur will preach his farewell sermons at 11 a. m. and 8 p. m. at the Episcopal Church of St. Stephen and the Incarnation, Sixteenth and Newton Streets Northwest, prior to leaving Monday for the Chaplains' Training School at Harvard University. The congregation will tender the pastoral family a reception tomorrow at 9 p. m. in the parish hall.

The Rev. Wilber H. Wilson, for two years associate pastor of Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church, also will enter the Chaplains' Training School in the coming week. His last sermon will be heard tomorrow at 8 p. m. There will be a reception for him and Mrs. Wilson and their family at 9 p. m.

30 New Students In Bible Institute

Thirty new students enrolled this past week in the Washington Bible Institute which opened its second term of the year. More than 250 students have come into the institute since last fall, said President Glenn Wagner of the institute, Washington's only interdenominational Bible school in which 50 churches and 17 denominations are represented. Students come from 35 States.

Enrollment is still open to the public during the first week in February. There is no tuition for the 18 courses taught by nine local ministers and four laymen.

The Ladies' Aid Society of Takoma Park Baptist Church will mark its twenty-second anniversary of its founding with a luncheon Wednesday at 1 p. m. Mrs. E. R. Carter will preside.

Father Slaven was educated in Boston and ordained in 1934. He received his theological degree the following year and his Ph. D. in 1936. He has taught at Catholic University since 1936, where he is an assistant professor. Father Slaven is a very popular speaker and has addressed the Catholic Clubs of Yale, Princeton, Harvard, University of Michigan, University of West Virginia and the University of Virginia, and has spoken on the Catholic Radio Hour several times. He has a very stimulating message to bring us at this time.

3 Bus Lines to Be Eliminated, 1 Extended This Weekend

Three bus lines will be eliminated and one route extended this weekend as part of the Public Utilities Commission's compliance with the Office of Defense Transportation's program to save rubber and gas by forcing riders to use streetcars or to walk to their destinations.

The lines to go out of existence are the Foxhall Village line (which will be compensated for by extension of the Glover Park line), the Bureau of Engraving loop and the Zoo line, a fair weather service that won't be missed this weekend.

With the elimination of the Foxhall Village short loop tomorrow morning, every third bus on the Trinidad-Glover Park line will proceed past Thirty-fifth Street on Reservoir Road to Foxhall Road, south on Foxhall and Q Street to MacArthur Boulevard, thence west to a terminal just east of Nebraska Avenue.

18-Minute Service

Since the Glover Park buses run at six-minute intervals, the diversion of every third one to the Foxhall Village area will mean that residents of this area will get bus service once every 18 minutes. In ordering the elimination of the local line and the extension of the number of through buses, it was anticipated that many persons in this area would walk short distances to board Cabin John streetcars, or, if 18 minutes is too long to wait, would walk to the regular terminal of the Glover Park line on Forty-first Street, south of Davis Place.

In the order for this change, issued December 11, the PUC calculated that the elimination of the Foxhall Village line would save 195,880 bus miles per annum. The extension of the Glover Park line means an increase of only 29,300 miles, so a total saving of 166,580 miles is expected.

Loughborough Line Delayed

The Bureau of Engraving loop to be discontinued is not the long line that goes from Barney Circle to the bureau but a short line that runs from Twelfth and H Streets Northwest out to carry workers from the business district to the Department of Agriculture and the engraving plant.

The Zoo line, which used to run on fine Sundays and holidays from Sixteenth and Harvard Streets down into the park simply went the way of all sightseeing vehicles for the duration.

Approval by the joint board was given a PUC majority vote to acquiesce with the ODT's request that the opening of the new Loughborough Road bus line, scheduled for Monday, be postponed for at least 60 days. In the order the PUC repeated its statements that it felt the line was necessary and not in conflict with the ODT conservation policies, but that the ODT request would be respected anyway. Minority PUC Member Gregory Hankin, in a formal dissenting opinion, expanded the seven points of disagreement which he had outlined in a letter to Eastman yesterday.

One of Hankin's principal points was that the Capital Transit Co., if it wished to avoid improvement of service, has only to show to the ODT an increase in bus miles at any particular point. "We may soon find ourselves in the position where we can regulate only in the manner in which the Capital Transit Co. or the Office of Defense Transportation want us to regulate," Hankin protested.

Confirmation Vote On WMC Nominees Expected Monday

Approval of 30 nominees for key positions in the War Manpower Commission was postponed for a second time by the Military Affairs Committee yesterday, but members indicated that a favorable vote for all but possibly one or two might be expected Monday.

Senator Kilgore (Democrat) of West Virginia, who presided at the meeting which heard Manpower Commissioner McNutt discuss the nominees and their jobs, explained additional time was asked for by some members to give them and other Senators more opportunity to examine the qualifications of the 30 men.

A number of the appointees are in fact already on their War Manpower jobs, Senator Kilgore said. The names of the 30 are before the committee as a result of a requirement in one WMC appropriation bill requiring Senate confirmation for jobholders receiving more than $4500 a year in the agency.

Onward, Christian soldiers,
Marching as to war,
With the cross of Jesus
Going on before!
Christ, the royal Master,
Leads against the foe;
Forward into battle
See His banners go.

The occasion for the writing of this famous marching hymn was a union of the Sunday Schools of Yorkshire, England, in 1865. With banners waving and crosses high, the children proceeded from one village to another, singing enthusiastically and forgetting the tiresome journey.

Midweek Rite Changed At Pilgrims

Decision to hold the mid-week service of the Church of the Pilgrims, on the Parkway at Twenty-second and P Streets Northwest, on Wednesday evening instead of Thursday evening, has proved to have been a wise one, the Rev. Andrew R. Bird, D. D., minister, reports.

DR. BIRD

"We have noted an improvement in attendance since making this change," said Dr. Bird. "We instituted this change because of our desire to help in a small way in easing the transportation burden Thursday evenings, when buses and streetcars are heavily loaded with shoppers, and to enable our church attenders to avail themselves of the Thursday evening shopping hours now that Government workers generally are on a six-day week. I might add that our Sunday services have been better attended since the restrictions on automobile driving went into effect. Of course, driving to church and back is not banned under the pleasure driving edict, but we have noted a better turnout on Sundays."

The meeting is being sponsored by the Washington Chapter of the Notre Dame de Namur Guild, which is composed of relatives and friends of the Sisters of Notre Dame de Namur as well as alumnae from the colleges, academies and schools conducted by them. This guild was founded in May, 1941, and has for its main objective the raising of a fund to aid in the rebuilding of the mother house of the order in Belgium, which was destroyed during the German invasion in 1940. This year the funds collected will be used to help defray the expenses of repatriating the 12 sisters of the order who are interned in Japan.

Housing Seen For Members Of Congress

New hope for homeless Congressmen—and others—was held out in an announcement yesterday by Defense Homes Corp. that some apartments in McLean Gardens, Fairlington and Naylor Gardens would be finished early in March.

Rents have been tentatively set, pending rent-control approval, and managers named. A recent ruling that Congressmen, for housing considerations anyway, are essential warworkers, will allow them to make applications for apartments in the DHC developments.

At McLean Gardens apartments will range in size from two and a half rooms to four and a half. Rents will range from $60 to $87.50. The two and a half size consists of living room, bath, dressing room, dining alcove and kitchen. Ralph S. Scott, builder of Scott's Hotel, has been named manager. In March, 72 apartments in the first four buildings are expected to be completed.

Fairlington, which is at Seminary Heights, Alexandria, is expected to serve chiefly those working in the Pentagon and the Navy Annex, with 70 per cent of the apartments kept for Army and Navy employes. Apartments will range in price from $58.50 to $89.50, for three and a half to five and a half rooms.

Manager of the Fairlington is George C. DeNeale. If weather permits, between 600 and 700 units will be finished in March.

Edward M. Blanchard has been named manager of Naylor Gardens. Rents will range from $59.50 to $79.50 for one, two and three bedroom units. There will be 748 apartments here.

Included in all the rent quoted above are heat and all utilities. Each apartment has an electric stove and refrigerator, bought long before priorities were needed.

Seminary Dean Praises Spirit Of British People

Dr. Lynn Harold Hough last night praised the British people's "unconquerable spirit" in fighting to maintain the "traditions of a living democracy."

Dr. Hough, dean of Drew Theological Seminary, Madison, N. J., addressed a worship service at Hamline Methodist Church, Sixteenth and Allison Streets Northwest, following the "victory dinner" climaxing the annual membership drive of the Washington Methodist Union.

The Rev. George Conner, pastor of Congress Heights Methodist Church, and drive chairman, reported that memberships totaling more than $3700 have been contributed to the union—church extension and home missionary project of local and nearby Methodist congregations.

Dr. Hough, who described his experiences while visiting England last summer, was introduced by Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes, former Methodist resident bishop here. O. O. Thomen, union president, presided.

Soviet and Uruguay Renew Relations

The Soviet Embassy here announced last night that diplomatic relations between Uruguay and the U. S. S. R., broken off in 1934, would be resumed.

An embassy spokesman, making the announcement, said only that the resumption of relations came in an exchange of notes to be made public today.

Correction

The picture of Morris Lewis, director of field activities for Russian War Relief, Inc., with headquarters in New York City, was erroneously included among those in The Post of January 22 of victims of the disastrous air liner crash in Dutch Guiana, January 15.

LEWIS

The Morris Lewis who was killed was an information specialist in the Office of the Chief of Special Services, War Department. The accompanying photo is of the Russian Relief field director.

YESTERDAY'S ANSWER

Chaplain Lev Stresses Morale As Victory Factor

The importance of morale in winning the war was stressed last night by Chaplain Aryeh Lev, who addressed dedicatory ceremonies for a service flag at Adas Israel Synagogue, Sixth and I Streets Northwest, honoring its men in our fighting forces.

"When machines and men and discipline are equal on both sides," he said, "the side which has the greatest will to live is the side that will win," and added that religion undergirds morale. He is assistant to the Army chief of chaplains.

The service flag is a gift of Mrs. Louis Rodis in memory of her husband, Dr. Louis Rodis.

Grandpa Has Another Birthday!

- There's a Birthday today . . . over at 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue . . . a Birthday that means as much to America and the World, as it does to little John and little Franklin in Grandpa's arms.
- Officially it's the Birthday of a Nation's President. In reality it's the Birthday of a good and kindly man.
- Lucky little Franklin . . . lucky little John . . . with a Grandpa who finds the time, even in the stress of world affairs, to be just Grandpa . . . to dandle them upon his knee.
- Lucky America . . . with a leader who thinks in terms of human souls and human wants . . . and who applies that same deft, kindly touch to the complex problems of a Nation and a World at war.
- Perhaps because of this great human trait, America responds en masse each year to attend the President's Birthday Ball . . . and lends its money and its sponsorship wholeheartedly to the Georgia Warm Springs Fund . . . to aid the lame, the halt, the helpless . . . a movment near and dear to the President's heart.
- And so on the Anniversary of his Birthday . . . the workers and executives of The Hecht Co. again extend congratulations to little John's and little Franklin's Grandpa . . . to America's first citizen . . . to the great man, with the great heart, in the White House.
